And so he became a more artist and took a poor studio, and daubed on canvas and pretended to paint pictures. And there was another millionaire's daughter got to coming to his studio and sitting for her picture. In those delightful fittle tete-a-tetes he forgot all about the romantic maiden, and when the romantic maiden came one night in peasant costume as a sweet surprise to run away with him she found he was married to the other girland had gone off on his honeymoon. She thinks that romances are all lies now, and that nothing happens in real life as it happens a books. She's ab out right.

The Boy's Suggestion.

From The Boston Herald.

It was at the dinner table. The head of the house has a passion for preserving, filing and indexing every letter that comes to him, and has accumulated an immense mass of corresdence. His wife believes that when a letpondence. His wife believes that when a letter has been read the beat thing to do is to destroy it. The conversation turned on the relative meries of the two systems, and a lady guest related that she knew of a gentleman recently deceased in a neighboring city who left instructions that his correspondence should be buried with him. "They actually had to have a coffin made on purpose, so as to make room for the letters," she said. "Great fleott, father," exclaimed the son and heir, "they'd have to bury you in a freight car!"

Very Like The "Faith Cure." A caricature which appears in some of the spectacled physician bending over a sprightly dame, whose pulse he is feeling. She comdame, whose pulse he is feeling. She complains that she has not slept well last night, "Ah, then Madame," he says, "you must drink a glass less water to morrow morning."
"But, Doctor," she says, "the day before yesterday I took a glass more and I slept excellently well." "Then," he replies, "you may take an extra glass to morrow morning." "Oh, then," she retorts, "it seems to me that is comes to the same thing whether you take a glass more or a glass less." "Yes, Madame," ts the answer; "hut only when you take it under medical advice."

The Old Original. From The Portland Argue.

Marion was sitting at the open window and ser father desired her to move away, as she would be likely to catch cold. "Oh, uo," she said, "I will not." Her father insisted that she must do as he said. She was suddenly taken with a little fit of sueezing. "There, you have got cold now," exclaimed her father. Marion, not wishing to acknowledge it, replied, "Oh, no, I have not; that is my other cold."

Mrs. B.—"My dear, you came in too late ast night, and you talked in your sleep." Mr. B. (uneasily)—"Did I? What did I Mrs. B.—'It sounded like ante up, jack-Mr. B. (with admirable presence of mind)—
"Yes, my dear, I had been discussing Volapuk with Jones. The expression which escaped me in my sleep means 'God bless our
