TORONTO, ONT.

AN ALDERMANIO WAGER. he Chairman of the Property Committee and Aid. Saltam's Little Dispute.
Although a member of the Property Committee, Ald. Eaxter has not attended its eetings for months past until yesterday, then he presented himself once more to take are in the deliberations. The cause of his abonce was a pledge that he had given that would not sit at the Board until such times seither the Chairman or Ald. Hallam gave a unner to the committee in payment of a wager etween the two, of which he had been the as either the Chairman or Ald Hallam gave a dunner to the committee in payment of a wager between the two, of which he had been the subject. On taking his seat he explained that he was still waiting for that banquet but had finally despaired of bringing the two aldermen to a sense of their duty.

The Chairman: "Mr. Baxter, I am sure I am willing to give the dinner, but I think that Ald. Hallam has lost and ought to set it up."

Ald. Hallam: "Now, Mr. Chairman, that is all nonsense. Gentlemen, the facts of the case are these: Ald. Irwin and myself were at the Reform Club, when I stated that Ald. Baxter had received £50 from the Northern Railway as a salary for being director on its board. Ald. Irwin said it was not true, and offered to pay for a dinner for the committee if I was correct on condition that I did the same if I failed to prove the assertion. I consented and took up the challenge."

The Chairman: "You said it was £100, not £50."

The Chairman: "You said it was £100, not £50."

Ald. Hallam: "No, I did not. I wrote to Mr. Backer, manager of the Northern, and other parties, and got no renly. Now that Ald. Baxter is here he is in the best position to set us right.—Mr. Baxter, did you last year receive £50 from the Northern?"

Ald. Baxter: "So you were interfering in my business, and using my name, were you?"

Now you say you wrote to Mr. Barker, Did he answer you?"

Ald. Halfam: "No, he did not."

Ald. Baxter: "And you wrote to other parties? Did they answer yon?"

Ald. Hallam: "No, they did not."

Ald. Baxter: "Well, neither will I, All I want you to do is to charge me with having received £50 from the Northern and you will soon have my answer."

Here the subject, which had afforded the members considerable amusement, dropped. STEINWAY, CHICAGO, Oct. 3.—The feeling developed in wheat in this market was greatly excited again, more so than on any previous day, being the outcome of wild speculation. Some of the oldest operators described to-day's opening as, with the exception of war times, without a parallel. Possibly never in the history of the trade did prices fluctuate so 'wildly as to-day. Almost the whole range of the day's market, which was seven cents, was covered within 6 minutes from the opening. This will illustrate the condition of the market.

seven cents, was covered within 6 minutes from the opening. This will illustrate the condition of the market.

Prices ran up and down a cent at a jump, with no trades at intervening figures. When operators wanted to buy there was but little wheat to be had, and when they wanted to sell there was but little demand to take the wheat. To-day's business shows a marked falling off as compared with the preceding day, and the trading is principally in the way of evening up and settling up trades. Operators do not care to sell on such a market, as it is too easily controlled, and at the same time many operators would not risk buying at the prices ruling. Many merchants are advising their customers to stop making new trades in wheat for the present at least, and there is rapid settling up, or balancing up of trades. As to the opening, it is not describable. At the first few trades at 24 and 6 over the closing figures of yesterday, it immediately sold up 3/c. more, or in other words prices were 3/k higher for December within five minutes after the opening than the closing figures of yesterday. Foreign markets were better and higher and domestic markets decidedly higher than yesterday. Duluth No. 1 hard sold 10c above Chicago No. 2. The corn but was the scene of activity and confusion during the entire session. Fluctuations were wild and the course of prices difficult to follow, so exciting was the pit at times.
