Poetry. BY THE SEA. The evenside, and the sun is dying, Painting the sky in his rosy beam, And out to seaward the cloud-making flying.

Are crimson bright in his parking gleam, In dazzling light, o'er the wave extending, In burnished glow on each foamy crest, At the open portals of sunset ending His pathway illumines the ocean's breast.

O lights of the sunset, soft and tender! O lights of the sun in your rosy splendour! O billow ocean that heaves below! O rolling waves that are ceaselessly, In wild, sweet music along the shore, Tell me the tales ye are still repeating, Sighing and moaning for evermore, In seething foam 'mong the gray rocks Where, rushing ye break in doleful roar, Sighing on your restless roaming, With a wailing cry of hope and despair, In the morning light or the shadowy gloaming.

Tell me what are thy songs, O Sea? Is there the wailing of a lonely sorrow, The death of loneliness that cannot bear, One beam of light from the brightness of To point to the dawn of a fairer morrow, Far away in the future spread? But, heedless, it rolls in its wondrous splendour Onward in cadence sublime and vast: Are those ocean songs, in their mystic grandeur, Requisitions sung for the vanished past? That is hushed and dead, yet still un-smitten, Will live and bloom in one hidden spot, Where in memory's chamber each scene is written, Too deeply given for Time to blot? But see, o'er the waters the light grows dimmer, And fainter the sea-gulls to westward fly, Pale stars look down in a feeble glimmer, As the crimson fades from the opal sky, I soon shall sleep, and perchance, in dreaming, Shall live once more in the past that's fled, And faint the rays of its brightness beaming In mellow radiance round my bed, Or it may be shall dream of no bliss that's fleeting, But of that new life that is yet to be, When no cloud shall arise to dim that meeting, Where I stand with Him by the Jasper Sea! —Stella.

Select Literature. "OUR BROWNIE" "And now tell me where is 'our Brownie'? Not far off, I am sure, for here are two of her attendant sprites, Adonis and Apollo. I thought she would—'The speaker was interrupted by the entrance of the young lady in question, who rushed up to him with an exclamation of delight. 'A thousand welcomes back to England, dear Frank!' she cried, embracing him with all the strength that a small female of four feet something could command. 'Frank Maitland was a first-rate specimen of an Englishman. He stood six feet two 'in his stockings,' owned a handsome pair of blue eyes, chestnut-brown hair and mustache. His like might have been in any company of gentlemen; but the same could not be said of Brownie, than whom a more quaint and original specimen of her sex scarcely existed.
