

done all things well," may use what has been written to the comfort of sorrowing hearts surrounded by dead and dying, the writer casts his bread upon the waters in simple reliance on the promise, "thou shalt find it after many days."

