A nearly fatal stabbing affray occurred in the swamp last night. A Spaniard named Lewis Goomer was beating a half-breed woman who had, been living with him, but wanted to go back to her home in Nanaimo. A Swede fisherman named Johnson heard the screams and want to the woman's rescue. In souffling named Johnson heard the screams and went to the woman's rescue. In scuffling Johnson fell, when Goomer plunged a knife into his head. The blade penetrated deeply, cutting a branch of the main artery. He was taken to the lock-up, where he fainted twice from loss of blood before the doctor arrived, which the latter did just in time to save Johnson's life. Goomer was captured, and committed for trial to day.

Henry Brown and family, of the Swan Lake hotel, were unpleasantly reminded of the first enow of 1894 early Saturday morning, when they barely escaped with their lives from the flames which enveloped their home. Shortly before one o'clock Miss Brown was awakened by a sense of suffocation, and soon realised the danger that attended any loss of time in vacating the building, which was then burning freely. She aroused the other members of the family, who had to rush from the house in their night clothes, the floors falling in almost at the same time. One of the children sustained a slight injury in the rush. There was no hope of asving either the building or its contents, which are a total loss. The occurrence was reported to the Provincial police by Mr. Sills, owner of the place, but as the stery of the fire had every appearance of being gennine, it was not brought necessary to send an officer to investigate the cause.

HE CHOSE THE DRESS WITH T RED FRONT IN IT.

Which Goes to Show That Men Have H rid Taste-And Yet Solomon In All I Glory Was Not Arrayed Like One These Ladies—The Mysteries of Fashio [Copyright, 1893, by American Press Assoc

The really well dressed lady is si who has everything in keeping fro "tip to toe" upon all occasions. On too many make a point of appearing well in public at the expense of t no less essential garments not seen ou side of the intimate home life. It like the fairy story of faces withou heads and fronts without backs to the women of the fairy land. It is not considered now so necessary to have do ens upon dozens of undergarments each kind, for fashion changes very se sibly in the matter of underlinen, an so six different undergarments and si petticoats are considered a suitable out fit. Less petticoats would do. Let us begin at the beginning. Si undervests of flannel, three for warme and three for very cold days, and a fev of gauze if in summer. Flannel tight are worn in winter by almost every body, and over these cotton drawers.

These are trimmed lavishly with lace sometimes there being six and eigh ruffles. Bows of ribbon are often se on, but the majority of ladies wear plain embroidery and tucks or heavy hand crocheted lace. In some cases ribbon i seen through the meshes. Few ladie of the new generation wear chemises but put the corset of whatever kind i is next the vest, and over this is th neat corset cover. Now, the corset cover can be as plain as the wearer likes, of it can be smothered in lace and embroid ery, but it is generally medium, as too much trimming makes the dress look bulky. So we will set that garmen down as profusely trimmed for young and this women and rather plain for elderly and fat ladies.

After the corset cover, which may o may not have a skirt, comes a pretty flamel skirt, white or colored and em-broidered. It depends upon the lady's age and condition as to the outside skirt. It may be of eiderdown flannel in pretty colors, or it may be silk or white cam-bric, elaborately ruffled or trimmed with numerous ruffles of lace. Silk skirts are not considered high style now, but rather the white muslin with several hemstitched lawn ruffles, each edged with narrow lace, generally valenciennes, though some other of the narrow laces are used, notably cluny, which is very durable as well as preti All these are garments which would really come under the head of everyday wear. The nightdresses are of every degree of beauty and finish, the plainest having rows of tucking and the most ornate being nearly covered with lace and embroidery and often ribbons. There are some ladies who would really prefer to have their undergarments so trimmed than to put the money in a sealskin coat if they could have but one, so fine and dainty is their nature.

Next to these garments come the lounging dress, which is slipped on for that delicious quiet half hour before retiring when one sits in a great easy chair with her feet on the fender, and thinks over the events of the day, and passes in review all the pleasant things that have happened, and plans revenge and sharp sayings to pay for the mean little stings she has been made to feel. In the morning for the petit leve, as the French call it, there is such a cozy, comfortable eiderdown flannel robe, which is as simple as any garment can be, but so loose and so warm that it is no hardship to leave the downy bed to don it. This is generally of bright color, like red and blue, or pale pink and gray or blue, and it could not be improved upon for the purpose. For the hour or so before breakfast that one passes in one's room after the bath or putting things to rights this wrapper is a delight. Then, when the bell rings, a minute's work serves to hang it in the wardrobe and see another gown in its place, generally a neat, plain frock, snug and where it can be compassed, in bright color, or at least with some bright spot about it, like, for instance, a basque of red or blue, or at least with some touch of color. Men like to see bright colors and to take away with them in the morning the vision of a spark of brilliancy that keeps their hearts warm all day. Didn't Josiah Allen's wife wear a pink bow, and didn't Josiah get up courage to tell her that it made him feel like courting her all over again? I have a brother—one of those dear, heedless men that are so busy providing for their families' needs that they never seem to notice anything that goes on around them. There came a rather sudden invitation to a wedding, and Flora declared she hadn't a suitable dress for the occasion, as she had been in mourning for several years. "Wear that dress with the red front to it. That's pretty,' said my big brother, speaking of a breakfast wrapper made of black cashmere with a cherry surah front. No words of ours could make the dear fel-
