

Agricultural and emigrant societies lately are established throughout all parts of these countries.

Public bounties are given by the provincial governments to encourage agriculture and fishery.

Granted in New Brunswick, 1829 and 1830 :

Bounties on fish	£. 8,000
Bounties on corn from new lands . . .	6,000
	<hr/>
	£. 14,000

(Colonial Journals.)

Amount actually paid on similar grants in 10 years.

Bounties on fish	£. 15,847
Corn	20,807
	<hr/>
	£. 36,654

(Journals of the House of Assembly, 1829.)

The vote for 1829 was in amount a sixth part of the whole provincial revenue. The bounty on fish is the more remarkable, as its importation into the West Indies from foreign ports is prohibited.

Granted in Nova Scotia for 1829 and 1830 :

Bounties on fisheries	£. 15,000
-------------------------------	-----------

Amount actually paid on similar grants during the last 10 years.

Bounties on fisheries	£. 15,723
On agriculture	10,549
	<hr/>
	£. 25,272