Golden Text—Speak ye truth each one with his neighbor.—Eph. 24: 25.

GOD'S PURPOSES CANNOT BE HELPED BY FALSEHOOD.

Lying has not always been confined to the worldly, or people outside of the churches, as there are many, and flagrant examples of plous frauds. There have not been wanting distinguished flagrant examples of plous frauds. There have not been wanting distinguished people who have advocated the righteousness of doing evil if it will work out good, or of holding back the truth, if it will hurt by being told, or of telling plous falsehoods, when, in their ignorance, such deception has been thought to be in favor of promoting religion. I am afraid there is a tendency even today, among some good men, to advocate what they know to be untrue, thinking that such untruths will advance true piety and having no confidence in the actual truth, believing that its advocacy would be against real religion.

I wish you could have seen the comical sight of Benny Mink, Dick Otter and all their friends stuck in the deep black mud of Mirror Pond. You derk night, through that tunnel (which that rascal Sammy Muskrat had dug through that dam), why, the whole bot-om of Mirror Pond seemed covered with a layer two feet deep of ink-black muci-age. It was as sticky as black glue. And as all these little people clawed and clawed to get out they sank deguer.

And as all these little people clawed and clawed to get out, they sank deeper and deeper in the mire,

Mrs. Jenny Bluejay sald to her husband: "Let's all make a terrible racket and call the big fishing birds, for perhaps they could pull the little people out of this black muclege."

Her husband exclaimed in admiration of his wife's cleverness and good sense: "Good idea, that's the most sensible thing I've heard today." But neither of them thought of the danger of calling thing I've heard today." But neither of them thought of the danger of calling the big birds of prey; they forgot that these birds, instead of helping, might eat the little people.

Dr. J. W. Robertson of Ottawa was one of a committee of four Red Cross representatives of Canada to visit Europe recently. These samples form the nucleus of the mammoth undertaking now being launched. fisher, Mr. Crow, Mr. Buzzard and other big bird fishers came circling over the bottom of Mirror Pond. And you ought to have heard the yells and screeches of the little forest people who were stuck in the mud. The big birds of prey were hungry, and had not had any breakfast, and they swooped down upon the little people with their wonderful claws ready for business, while their great wings sounded like the buzzing of flying ma-chines. Then all the Bluejays saw what a errible mistake they had made in calling the big birds of prey to help the lttle people out of the mud. Then all the Bluejays saw what a terrible mistake they had made in calling the big birds of prey to help the little people out of the mud. And they all cried in fear, and hoped that the big birds would not kill any of their dear friencis.

Soon she heard the sound of the great birds eating their breakfast, and sies shuddered as she heard the breakfast do you suppose she saw? Why, each big bird was swallowing the fat trout which were flopping in the little shallow pools on the bottom of what was once Mirror Pond. There were so many fish to eat, that the great birds had a wonderful fish breakfast.

But remember, my dear, that those little folks who were stuck in the mud.

The Central Red Cross Society is possessed of an advisory board of the people of this city and district, and that every fresh appeal that is made in its behalf is met not only generously, but cheerfully, as well. Yet it is not superfluous, I think, to bring to possessed of an advisory board of the notice of the reading public two new phases of Red Cross activity that are at the present moment engaging the least buyers in Canada. Custom in certain countries demands certain variations in wearing apparel; hence the sample garments. In kindness to those who have so suffered and must look to a sympathetic ally for the bare necessities of life, the refugee clothing should conform to the prevailing mode of dress. This meant samples for multitudinous working branches the country over. An-

Given a few samples of the native garments of France and Serbia, together with several sketches and written directions, and asked to interest the women of the interest the women of the interest the women of the native branches of the Canadian Red Cross Society, the individual chapters of the Daughters of the Empire and the numberless auxiliary working circles throughout Canada are engaged in the making of endless quantities of garments for the repatriated civilian bopulations of the Aliled nations. It would seem a hopeless task to any but a band of workers trained by four years' actual experience to cope with any emergency. While the scneme is as yet in the first stages of evolution, its shape can easily be discerned at no great distance shead.

The story of the new departure in Red Cross activity is interesting. The needs of the retigees in the lands devastated by a ruthless enemy are unspeakably great, and following the assertion of the British Red Cross Society that mon-combatants who suffer as the direct result of war come within the scope of the Red Cross Society that mon-combatants who suffer as set he direct result of war come within the scope of the Red Cross Society cabled the headquarters at Toronto urging assistance in generous measure. A grant of £50,000 from the society cabled the headquarters at Toronto urging assistance in generous measure. A grant of £50,000 from the sexecutive committee. Money was not enough. Ready-made garments to meet the needs of destitute nations of women, children and aged men cannot be procured. Labor is not sufficiently plentiful to speed up factories for such a demand. What more natural than that there should be an appeal for the service of the wonderful machinery of the patriotic women workers of Canada? This was the ultimate decision of the executive committee. Watch Over Them in Happi less

Do you find any application to the present day, when peace and happiness once again looms upon the horizon, in the following words of John Ruskin, from a lecture on "War," delivered at the Royal Military Academy, Woolwich,

"And now let me turn for a moment to you,-wives and maidens, who are the souls of soldiers; to you,-mothers, who have devoted your children to the great hierarchy of war. Let me ask you to consider what part you have to take for the aid of those who love you; for if you fail in your part they cannot fulfil theirs; such absolute helpmates you are that no man can stand without that of trial first finds you, nor when it verily finds you. You imagine that you are only called upon to wait and to suffer; to surrender and to mourn. You know that you must not weaken the hearts of your husbands and lovers, even by the lishwomen. To be heroic in change and sway of fortune is little;—for do you not love? To be patient through the great chasm and pause of loss is little;—for do you not still love in heaven? But to be heroic in happiness; to bear yourselves gravely and righteously in the dazzling of the sunshine of morning; not to forget the God in whom you trust, when He gives you most; not to fail those who trust you, when they seem to need you least; this is the difficult fortitude. It is not in the pining of absence, not in the peril of battle, not in the wasting of sickness, that your prayer should be most passionate, or your guardianship most tender. Pray, mothers and maidens, for your young soldiers in the bloom of their pride; pray for them, while the only dangers round them are in their own wayward wills; watch you, and pray, when they have to face, not death, but what you would have them be, they shall be, if you not only desire to have them so, but deserve to have them so; for they are but mirrors in which you will see yourselves imaged. If you are frivolous, they will be so also; if you have no understanding of the scope of their duty, they also will forget it; they will listhey will be wise for you; mock at their counsel, they will be fools for you; such and so absolute is your rule over them. You fancy, perhaps, as you have been told so often, that a wife's rule should only be over her husband's house, not over his mind. Ah, no!—the true rule is fust the reverse of that; a true wife, in HOSSACK—FORBES.

"But it is this fortitude also for which there is the crowning reward. Believe me, the whole course and character of your lovers' lives is in your hands;

A quiet but very pretty wedding was solemnized at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Forbes of West Zorra, on Wednesday, October 30, when their daughter Christina Beatrice, was united in marriage to George Duncan Hossack, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Hossack of Thamesford, at 2 o'clock, to the strains of Mendelsshon's wedding march, played by Miss Margaret Hossack, sister of the groom, The bride was prettily gowned in pearl grey duchess sath and cut stell trimmings, and carried a shower bouquet of bridal roses and fern, and entered the drawing-room on the arm of her father, and took her place with the groom, beneath an arch of autumn leaves and lattice work, with a background of white and green. The ceremony was performed by Rev. R. J. Ross of Auburn, Ont., cousin of the bride, amid immediate relatives of the contracting parties.
