BANK-NOTES AS CARDS.

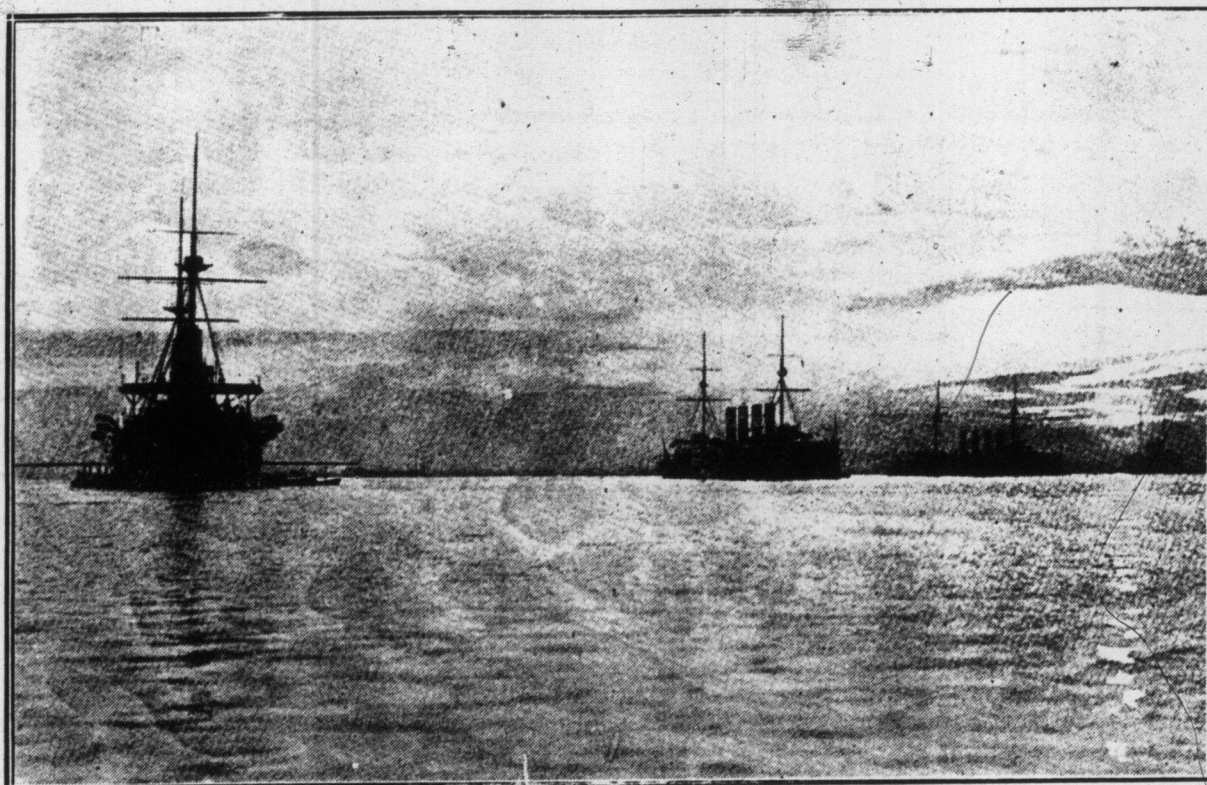

France, as is generally known, issued new bank-notes on New Year's day, and we learn that Russia has done the same.

The notes of 25 roubles bear the portrait of Alexander III. The colors are very complicated, and it is said that they produce a rainbow effect, says The London Globe. The 100 rouble notes bear a magnificent portrait of Catherine II., also a representation of

Before the French notes were in circulation ministers received as a New Year card a specimen of the notes from M. Lue-Olivier Merson of the institute. These notes possess no commercial value, for they do not bear the signature of the controller-general and the chief cashier. In the place of numbers they bear several noughts. Of course these cards are so few that the avidity of the collector has been aroused, and large sums of money have been offered for these unique New Year cards.—San Francisco Call.
