

of butter or a quantity of skunk's grease. The operation of either is to produce nausea or sickness, which dislodges the poison and effects a cure. The butter or grease must be given while the animal has life enough to swallow.

Pneumatic Punch and Ginger Beer.—Fill two half pint tumblers a third part full of toast and water; in one dissolve thirty grains of carbonate of soda, and in the other twenty-five grains of citric acid, both pounded fine; when the powders are perfectly dissolved, pour the contents of one tumbler into the other, and sparkling soda water is instantly produced.

Ginger Beer will be produced by the addition of eight grains of ginger and three drachms of lump sugar, rubbed well in a mortar with the carbonate of soda.—Household Economist.

Remedy for the Rot in Sheep.—One table spoonful of spirits turpentine, and two of water, to be given once in eight days, for three times—one table spoonful of water to be given first, then the spirits of turpentine; and lastly, the remaining spoonful of water. This remedy has been used for many years by a farmer at Grimsby, in Lincolnshire, in his own flock, most successfully.

Hints to Young Farmers.—Consider your calling the most elevated, and the most important; but never be above it, nor be afraid of the frock and the apron.

Put off no business, which ought and can be done to-day, until to-morrow.

As soon as the spring opens and the frost is out of the ground, put your fences in order.

Plant no more ground than you can well manure and cultivate to advantage.

Never hire a man to do a piece of work which you can do yourself.

Every day has its appropriate duties, attend to them in succession.

Keep no more stock than you can keep in good order, and that of the best kind.

Never "run into debt" without a reasonable probability of solving it at the time agreed.

By driving your business before you, and not permitting your business to drive you, you will have opportunities to indulge in innocent diversions.

Keep a place for your tools—and your tools in their places.

Instead of spending a rainy day at the dram-shop, as many do to their ruin, repair whatever wants mending—post your books.

In December reckon and settle with all those with whom you have accounts—pay your shop-bill and your mechanics, if not promptly done at the time, which is best of all.
