MUNICIPAL SANATORIA

Crusade Against Tuberculosis in Canada—The Situation Outlined—Local Treatment an Advantage

(Conservation for May)

Tuberculosis is a disease that is frequently coincident with poverty. The treatment necessary is generally expensive, and the patient is often for long periods of time incapable of doing any work. It is not surprising, therefore, that the charitable inclined should take a deep interest in the crusade against the disease.

In Canada a number of institutions and organizations have been established for the care of the tuberculous. Most of these have been brought into existence by social workers. Sometimes, however, provincial governments have provided sanatoria, either wholly, or in part, at their own expense. In other instances, the provinces—namely Ontario—have assisted in erecting buildings as well as in their maintenance when completed. Still another class are what might be called municipal sanatoria—that is, they are erected and supported largely by local municipalities. Some of these only accept patients from the contributing municipalities; while others accept any patients who are residents of the municipality or not.

With such a variety of institutions to support, it is not surprising that various means have been devised for raising funds. Nor is it surprising that there has grown up confusion amongst would-be contributors as to how their subscriptions should be directed.

In order to avoid such confusion, and at the same time to co-ordinate the efforts that are being made for the suppression of the disease, it is essential that the situation be clearly understood. In the first place, tuberculosis is a communicable disease, and as such comes directly under the purview of the municipal health authorities. In any attempt at co-ordination, therefore, the work must revolve around the municipal health officials.

Specialist Did Skin Trouble No Good

Very Itchy and Disfiguring. Got a Little Cuticura Soap and Ointment and Was Cured.

"For two summers I suffered with skin trouble on my arms, and on my legs from my knees down. My arms were badly disfigured, and I kept them covered. I came like the hives, and was very itchy. I consulted a specialist, who gave me medicine, as well as an ointment, but seemed to do no good. It was beginning to appear on my face.

"I got a little Cuticura Soap, the first touch of Ointment seemed to relieve, and before the Cuticura Ointment was finished I was cured. I have not the least sign of trouble. I think it would have spread over my whole body if Cuticura Soap and Ointment had not cured me. I am delighted with them, and do feel pleased to think I have something I have confidence in. I have all my friends about them, and I think Cuticura Ointment is the best I ever saw." (Signed) M. J. Boddy, 73 McCaul St., Toronto, Dec. 22, 1910.

Cold-Sore Began to Heal With First Use of Cuticura Ointment.

"Cuticura Ointment cured a very bad cold-sore that gave me hours of severe pain and loss of sleep. I tried lots of other remedies but nothing did me any good until I used Cuticura Ointment, and from the very first application it began to heal and now there is not even a scar left." (Signed) Mrs. W. Boyce, Memphis, Tenn.

For more than a generation Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment have afforded the speediest, safest and most economical treatment for skin and scalp troubles, of young and old. ## HOLDS SERIES OF MEETINGS ON BOY PROBLEM

Practical Talk by Doctor Winship of Boston, Education Journal Editor

BOY IS VITAL FACTOR

The Science of Bringing Him up and the Responsibility for Letting Him go to the Bad—One Thing to do is to Stop Distracting The Boy

(Bangor Commercial)

Dr. A. E. Winship, of Boston, editor of the Journal of Education, who is participating in a series of meetings on the Boy Problem in this city and Brewer, under the local organization of the Men and Religion Forward Movement, addressed three audiences in Bangor and Brewster Sunday.

Dr. Winship was apparently just from a Maine farm when he faced his audience in city hall in the afternoon, for he chose his most striking illustrations from the experiences of Maine men on Maine farms, and from start to finish held the closest attention of his audience.

"The boy," said he, "is the vital factor in the community. It is the young man's age, we are fond of saying, but I fear we fail too often to appreciate the importance of making our boys an asset and not a liability."

We take pride, and justly, in this age as an age of science, an age no longer of superstition or of luck. Maine, three years ago, bought an experimental farm with an orchard which, the year it was bought, yielded the former owner $400 worth of apples. This last year the state sold $60,000 worth of apples from the same farm. It is not following superstition, nor was it just luck, but scientific application of what the state has learned relative to apple raising, that brought about these results.

A man living within thirty miles of Bangor gave up robbing at the age of fifty-five years and devoted his life to getting what he could, by careful study and constant labor, out of a little farm of two and one-half acres of land. In twelve years he has cleared from $1,200 to $1,500 a year out of that land.

Another Maine man, who kept but one cow, went into dairying, studied it as best he could, and last year from thirty-five Jersey cows, sold $9,000 worth of cream. These men did not look at the moon to see if they were out of change, they tried to spray the orchard while the coddling moth got busy, they didn't look for a big yield—they gave each his problem careful study and applied the rules that science has prepared for operating their properties for practical results.

If a boy goes to the moon, it is usually almost a waste of time, I believe, that he has been sent to the moon and somebody's responsibility. It is not the responsibility of the moon to someone else's shoulders. If our boys turn out badly we say it's hard luck, but if they succeed we take credit for the result, and say it is science, just the same as we are apt to do in handling our farms and other problems.

There is a science in raising boys. It takes infinite patience, but in spite of the wonderful value of a boy, there are many parents who stand in the way of his doing his job. They are of the losing of the souls of their boys. Here he cited several experiences that show how a boy, in a short time, utterly goes from good citizenship to the bad, if not careful for him to show what kind of a boy he is, and how that boy may have done things that are of great value to the community, but he is not allowed to do them, and he is not allowed to be anything but a good boy. Starting in this way with only the good side of the boy before him, she was able to tell her audience that she had seen him do things that were of great value to the community, but he is not allowed to do them, and he is not allowed to be anything but a good boy.

He told how a man named Bishop, in Ames, Iowa, found no one in the town to take up boys' work and how he went to work to interest the parents and teachers. He had a class of 200, clergymen and teachers, many of whom, learning patiently, one night a week for eight weeks, what things to do to interest boys. They learned to be kind and to be of service to the community, and he said that he had seen him do things that were of great value to the community, but he is not allowed to do them, and he is not allowed to be anything but a good boy.

It is time we realized, that the salvation of Bangor, of America, and of the world, depends on our getting nearer to the boys. To do this means that we must study, but we must not forget the great stake in the case. Take the time, spend the money, give up your pleasure. You've got to do it if you'd save your boy from the most critical years of his boyhood, from 14 to 18, he decided. To be sure, it takes a good deal of a man to get along with a boy, especially when the man doesn't have much time. Have you been beating, hectoring and nagging with your boy? he asked.

The coddling moth doesn't wait while the man does other things, who ought to have sprayed his orchard, nor do the devil and his minions wait while we do other things—they get us. All up and down this country today are boys that have gone to the bad because their fathers didn't have patience with them, didn't recognize that the boy is budding into manhood and must be allowed to think some things for himself, must be turned by kindly ways and not driven, into right ways of thinking and doing. Fathers must get down and work with and for their boys, as well as pray, for when they have done this and their boys are their companions and allies, the problem of the saloon and of the brothel will take care of itself. Nothing that's worth because they act so gently (no purging or griping) yet so thoroughly while can be done without first thoroughly studying how best to do it.

"I wonder," said he in conclusion, "how much time the average father in Bangor and Brewer, had given to studying the problem of what to do and how to do it, for the boy—for his own boy?"

The Evening Meeting

At the evening meeting in the city hall Dr. Winship laid stress upon the responsibility for letting boys go to the bad, saying it was the duty of the church, community and school to see to it that boys are not allowed to go astray. "There is a responsibility resting on some one," he said, "for every boy that goes to the bad. And these institutions should do their duty in giving the boys the care they must have, if they expect to have them grow into lives of usefulness and goodness."

There is a great need for services and help for boys in all activities of their life. They need to be advised and trusted and given a vasty larger per cent. of care and thought than they are given today by those whose duty it is to see that they are brought up properly. Neither the church, the school nor the community has done its duty toward the boy.

Speaking of the efficiency, he quoted Frederick W. Taylor to the effect that of 20,000,000 workers in the United States, fewer than 20,000 are efficient, a tremendous if small percentage that can be traced largely to failure to guard the youth during his growing years and give him the bringing up that he should have.

Failure to do this, he said, is due largely to traditional ideas. Trouble is not taken to inquire what is best to be done but rather the old route is followed and the care of boys is allowed to drift along in the same channels as it has for years.

"One of the first things we have got to do in the present campaign," said Dr. Winship, "is to stop distrusting boys. It is a crime to say a young man is a boy in your community, if there is any thing that will give a boy a bad start it is to start a prejudice against him in the community. 'There is no boy about whom you could not say something bad and to let him know that there is a prejudice against him for something wrong he has done is the surest way of giving him a bad start.'"

In the connection Dr. Winship spoke of a teacher in a western city who had a wonderful faculty for getting hold of boys and turning them into good citizens. She taught the boys whom the other teachers could not handle and her success was due largely to taking them without prejudice and praising them for the good traits. She refused to take boys into her class, if the other teachers had told her anything bad about them and never allowed them to enter until they had been without prejudice and praised them for the good traits. Starting in this way with only the good side of the boy before him, she was able to tell her audience that she had seen him do things that were of great value to the community, but he is not allowed to do them, and he is not allowed to be anything but a good boy.

Exhibited on the stage during the evening were charts showing the condition of the boy problem in Bangor and Brewer and these were explained by Dr. Winship. Among the facts brought out were that in the two cities there are 2,217 church members, of which 1,387 are women, 646 men, 119 girls and 89 boys.

Johnny Adolphus Jones was one of the boys. And, strange as it may seem, he thought he was in love with one of the girls.

"Amy," he said earnestly, yearningly, when he had managed to get rid of her three little brothers and bumped her small cousin out of the room, "there is something I want to say to you. There is something that has been troubling me on my lips for the last two months."

The girl looked at him critically. "I know that," she answered brightly. "Why don't you share it off?"

Thus his love was shattered at a single blow.

WANT SHARE OF MILLIONS OF DOLLARS

English Traders Figure That Tourists From America Will Spend $60,000,000

GO TO CONTINENT FIRST

Hope to Change This — The English Sunday Believed To Have Something to Do With it—Say They Can Buy as Well as Across Channel

London, May 15.—English traders are hoping to acquire much of the $60,000,000 which, it is estimated, will be brought to Europe by Americans during the spring and summer season of this year. Their chief concern, however, is the competition of the continent. Several interesting suggestions as to the best way to counteract this influence and to keep Americans in England were made by prominent art and antique dealers today.

"The American tourists land at Liverpool, come on to London, stay here for the week-end, and then cross to France. At the end of July they return to England, but have, in the meantime, spent nearly all their money. Consequently England does not benefit so much from her trans-Atlantic cousins as we think she should." It was in this way that most of the art and antique sellers expressed themselves. It was explained that only a few years ago Americans were content to buy works of art in London, but now the majority preferred to pass on to Paris. One explanation was that the artistic sentiment and temperament were much more pronounced among Parisians than in England. The art dealers even suggested that the American was not sufficiently keen to be interested in the Englishman, and not sufficiently English to be received without some kind of adverse comment. He meant that the American mixed much more easily with the French than with the English. The English Sunday was also suggested as one reason why the Americans preferred to spend the day on the continent, though it was also admitted that there were many Americans who refused to make purchases on the continent on Sundays.

"Of course, England is a free country," said a famous art dealer, "but there is not so much of the free and easy method of living in London and England as we find in some of the continental towns. Though, personally, I am only too glad to close my shop at an early hour on Sunday, I am only too glad to see the Americans. Trouble is not taken to inquire what is best to be done but rather the old route is followed and the care of boys is allowed to drift along in the same channels as it has for years."

"One of the first things we have got to do in the present campaign," said Dr. Winship, "is to stop distrusting boys. ## Don't Doctor Corns With Steel

Don't pare them! That just removes the top layer. It leaves the main part to grow. A slip of the blade may mean infection. Sometimes a dangerous infection. This form of home surgery should be ended forever. A few years ago a chemist invented the B & B wax—the heart of the Blue-jay plaster.

Now you simply apply this plaster. It is done in a jiffy. The pain instantly stops, and the corn is forgotten. This wonderful wax gently loosens the corn. In two days the whole corn, root and branch, comes out. No soreness, no discomfort. Please don't doubt it. Fifty million corns have been removed in this way. Millions of people know it. Just try it yourself, and never again will you let corns cause you pain.

As the picture is the sort B & B wax. It loosens the corn. It protects the corn, stopping the pain at once. It works around the toe. It is so padded to be comfortable. It is rubber adhesive to fasten the plaster on.

them near to the places where they were discovered. I can show you genuine Egyptian corns which may be purchased here for half the price demanded for similar goods in Cairo. The reason for this is that in London we must treat every corner as a customer who may enter our shop again. In Cairo and the other spots touched only once by the globe-trotter an abnormal price can be asked with impunity. And this applies to Babylonian, Greek and Roman goods, and curios discovered in almost every historical place. We do not ask more than the market price in London."

The art dealer made another interesting suggestion. In the interests of his trade, he said, it would be wise to form an association which could devote money to attracting to London art and curios about the borders of wealthy American tourists now beginning to pour into England. "Cor-tainly," he added, "if we allow such a huge fortune as $60,000,000 to pass through our country each year without securing a considerable portion of it we are no longer business men."

The case was an interesting one, Mr. West asserting that the donkey engine used by the contractors had set fire to his lumber lands and caused a heavy loss.

High H. McLean, K. C., and F. R. Taylor appeared for Mr. West and M. G. Teed, K. C., and E. A. Reilly, of Moncton, represented the defendants.

Most of the time, most of the weakness of the stomach, heart, brain and nerves from which men suffer are due to an early loss of Nature's reserve power. You need not suffer from this. You can be restored. The very element which you have lost you can get back, and you may be as happy as any man that lives.

Dear Sir,—I received the Belt O. K. on the 8th and am perfectly satisfied with it. My back does not bother me the way it used to. Today I finished up three shifts, two nights and one day, and I feel all right. I had to fire a locomotive twelve hours of that time.
