HEBREW ROOTS AND PERSIMMONS.-Query: Is there any thing in the study of Hebrew roots as a specialty in life that affects the person so engaged? We recell the idiosynemasy of the Rev. Professor Packard, of the School of the Rev. Professor Packard, of the Sciol of the Prophets' the Theolog-ical Seminary of the Epi-copal Church in Virginia. He had but just come from New England, and had never before seen the persimanon grow. Those acquainted with this singular fruit know well that it attains a high orange color some time before it is vine light orange color some time before it is ripe, end that at this time it is astringent to a degree. The doctor was taking a walk, and the glowing persimmons looked very tempting; so he thought he must for the first time taste the fruit. Its effect upon the pool man's mouth was very astonishing, and he became convinced that he had been cating the apples of sodom, or some other very poisonous thing. At this moment two other professors of the semibary fell in with the good man, and were made quite solicitous by his grimaces, which seemed to indicate that he had been swallowing by accident some of his own formidable roots. One ventured to ask

"Doctor, what have you been taking ?" With manifest effort to untwist his badly puckered mouth, the professor ejaculated, "Do-o on't speak to [me; but let me g home and die in the bosom of my family !' It is painful to reflect that the incident was often made the occasion of merriment amon the young theologues, and it is even said that one of them, having a slight symptom a stomach ache, acked the president of th faculty for permission to go home. When farther questioned why he desired to go home he said that he had a bad pucker in his mouth and stomach, and, besides, didn't feel well and would like to be allowed to die in the bosom of his family. Of the complete discomfiture which befell the gravity of the president it is not possible to tell .- Editor's Drawer, in Harper's Magazine for April.
