

Q. Did he live there all the year round?

A. Oh, yes, he lived there for sometime.

Q. How many years before the transfer?

A. I could not say but he was there when I married.

Q. And you married in the sixties? A. Yes.

Q. And he stayed right on that land for years after you married?

A. Yes, he stayed there all the time until?

Q. After the transfer? A. After the transfer.

Q. How long after the transfer?

A. About three years, I suppose.

Q. What became of the land then?

A. The way that I come to know about the land, he came to hire me to take him up to MacPhersons, him and his wife, with a horse and rig. I did not know what he was after, he came to hire me to take him up there, that is how I came to know that he wanted to sell the land. Then I only knew that he was going to sell the land when I got up to the Council Chamber, not till then.

Q. This MacPherson used to keep store there?

A. Yes.

Q. For a man named Hyman?

A. Yes, Wilson Hyman.

Q. Did he sell the land up there?

A. Not that day.

Q. Did he afterwards?

A. He was told by MacPherson he could not sell it because he did not have the consent of the Chief, he did not take the consent with him.

Q. So what happened after that?

A. I took him back and then I had to take him up again the next day.

Q. Did he get the consent of the Chief?

A. He took up the old man and the Chief had a big load on one horse-----
