A Physician is Blood Poisoned

While Performing a Delicate Surgical Operation.

How He Cured Himself

A Matter of Interest to All Whose Troubles Arise From Impure Blood.

Some time ago the celebrated and eminent Boston physician and surgeon, Dr. A. W. K. Newton, while performing a very delicate surgical operation, was unfortunately blood poisoned.

This was to him a most serious matter; it demanded the use of a medicine that would quickly and effectually remove every trace of poison from the vital fluid.

Dr. Newton, having a thorough knowledge of the cleansing and invigorating virtues of Paine's Celery Compound, immediately began its use, and the results were so pleasing and satisfactory, that the worthy doctor deems it fit and proper to say something regarding a medicine about which thousands are daily speaking.

"Paine's Celery Compound, is not a patent medicine, and it must not be confused with the ordinary nervines, bitters and sarsaparillas. It is as much superior to them in formula and results as the diamond is superior to glass. It purifies the blood, strengthens the nerves, and is nature's food for the brain.

"I had some trouble myself, from blood poisoning, received in a very delicate surgical operation. The formula of Paine's Celery Compound led me to try it, and I was much pleased with the result. I prescribe it for men and women who have no appetite, cannot sleep, and are weak and run-down. For this condition, and for disorders of the blood and nerves, it has equal power.

"When a man or woman has lost appetite, lost sleep, and feels that life is a burden, that person is in a serious condition. I prescribe Paine's Celery Compound for my patients who have these common and dangerous symptoms, with invariably satisfactory results. It is the best possible remedy to keep up one's strength and energy during the summer months."
