HAMILTON (CUP) — Disgruntled with the waffling of the Progressive Conservative party in Ottawa, three McMaster University students have decided to assist in the birth of a new federal political party with "strong moral values".

Jack Schoeman, Michael Van Pelt and Ray Pennings — all third-year history students — have devoted most of this semester to organizing the founding convention of the Christian Heritage Party, to be held November 18-21.

Founded in June 1986 with an initial membership of 125 people, the CHP now has about 5,000 paid-up members with 15 recognized riding associations across the country.

According to Van Pelt, the Christian Heritage Party, which is "pro-life", promotes traditional family values.

"We would not encourage or support homosexual behaviour and we encourage Christian morality in leadership," he said.

The party believes in a "free enterprise under God" system where responsibility for social programmes would be shifted from the government to churches and family and friends of the destitute.

Van Pelt said the many Ontario students involved in the party are dismayed by the lack of sincerity and integrity in today's federal government.

"I think young people are basically sick and tired of what we're seeing in government today," he said.

"I voted for Brian Mulroney. I was excited, but young people now can see this guy doesn't really know where he's going."

Van Pelt said the convention will be used to iron out party policy for the next federal election, when they hope to run 50 candidates.

Van Pelt said he doesn't yet have the maturity to be a candidate.

"We're three young guys. We know how to work hard, we've learned a lot about administration, but I would like to have a few more grey hairs before I run in an election."
