

when we get into His presence? No! All is peace in the presence of the God who counts the hairs of our head.

FRAGMENT.—That one thought, asking in everything, "What will be for Christ's glory?" is impossible to us if the question of our salvation be not settled. How can I be thinking what is for Christ's glory if I am pondering as to whether He has perfectly saved me? Job's heart was not happy in God, and all that came upon him tore his heart to pieces. Paul was happy in Him, and let all outward things go on as they might, the inward joy in God was not disturbed; nothing took him by surprise.

MEDITATIONS ON THE BOOK OF JUDGES.

(Continued from page 180.)

What Characterizes God's Witnesses in the Day of Ruin.

(Chap. vii. 1-14.)

In chap. vi., we have seen the servant prepared for the work for which God destined him; the verses which we have just read show us the characteristics of God's witnesses in a day of ruin.

In the days of the nation's moral prosperity under Joshua, when it was a question of going to