B.C. FRUIT GROWERS' CO-OPERATIVE

In the Province of British Columbia there are communities given over almost entirely to fruit-growing, and the farmers in these districts on their five, ten and twenty acres, are specializing in this industry. The British Columbia fruit growers usually have not the side lines of the fruit growers in Nova Scotia and Ontario. On account of their small area they give great care and attention to their orchards and as a result produce a very high grade of pears, peaches and plums. Particular attention is given to the packing, and the aim has always been to make the British Columbia pack the best on the market.

The individual fruit growers in the Pacific Province have learned the lesson that is being learned by the fruit growers everywhere, namely, that they must get together and market their fruit co-operatively thru a central marketing agency. The co-operative fruit growers of British Columbia are making a strong effort to supply the fruit needed in the farm homes of the Prairie Provinces and are already supplying considerable quantities to farmers' associations. In the matter of distance British Columbia has an advantage over Eastern Canada in the markets of Alberta and Saskatchewan, and when their organization has been completed there should be a market for a greater portion of their product in these two Provinces. The farmers in the Prairie Provinces are steadily building up their co-operative organizations and thru them they are beginning to purchase their fruit as well as their other necessities. There is a considerable demand for the grain and live stock produced in the Prairie Provinces in the markets of British Columbia. As these co-operative organizations, both among the grain growers and the fruit growers are brought to perfection, there will undoubtedly develop an extensive interchange of products for mutual benefit.

FEEDING FOR BONE

Altho the importance of dense, hard bone, with its accompaniment of strong tendon attachments, has been recognized by horse breeders from early times, it has remained for pig breeders to demonstrate the possibility of feeding so as directly to add strength to the bones of the growing animal. It has been separately demonstrated at the Wisconsin and Nebraska experiment stations in the United States that bone meal and other mineral supplying feeds given to maize-fed pigs produced a great increase in the strength of the bones. In some cases the strength was more than doubled by adding suitable mineral matter to the ration. These results suggest that horse breeders may profit by the same plan of feeding. The grasses and hay of certain districts underlaid with limestone are regarded as especially suited to the development of good bone, and horses off these lands have been valued accordingly. The low-lying lands, with their luscious growth-forming grasses, are often less abundantly supplied with bone-forming materials, and the horses raised on them are handicapped with the stigma of soft bone. The success of strengthening the bone by feeding pigs for that especial object may reasonably be expected to follow with horses. There is at least no damage to be feared from a moderate increase in the bone-forming substances supplied to the growing colt, so that that prospect of increased strength of bone should encourage experimentation along this line. If this plan works as well with horses as with pigs it will be a great boon, especially to draft horse production, where rapid growth is necessary to secure size, and the colts seem especially liable to suffer from any shortage in the mineral supply.

Unfinished stock arriving on the market in any quantity is hard to dispose of and forms a drag on the market, tending to lower prices all round.

Our British forty-six millions live in two small islands which produce about one-half of the food they eat. The common belief that the greater part of our food is imported from abroad is grotesquely untrue; it is only the greater part of our wheat that we obtain from abroad—L. G. Chiozza Money.

Golden West Balgreggan

Clydesdales, Shorthorns, Welsh Ponies, Shropshire and Oxfordshire Sheep, all Ages and Sexes for Sale

We exhibited this year only in Calgary and Edmonton, and won at these two shows, with our stock, 10 Championships, 8 Reserves, 2 Gold Medals, 3 Silver Medals, 45 Firsts and 25 Seconds. This unequalled success should be sufficient proof for the quality of our stock.

Our CLYDESDALES combine draftiness and quality in the highest degree. Horses are cheap now and this is the time to buy.

In SHORTHORNS we have both beef and dual purpose animals. No better investment than a few good young cows and heifers.

We are booking orders now for RAM LAMBS for Fall delivery.

Visitors welcome whether buying or not. Correspondence solicited. Farm five miles south-west of Calgary.
