ANIMAL FOOD FOR POULTRY

Advantages Lies in Promoting Rapid

sure that your poultry get nimal food. This advice has been frequently given by the most success ful feeders, but experiments made at the Station at Geneva emphasize the desirability of such food and seem to prove that it is a necessity, at least for ducks. Full details of the feeding trials are given in Bulletin No. 149, which will be sent to those applying

That it is desirable to feed poultry animal matter in some form has been long taught by scientific feeders; but the great utility of such feeds has probably never been so plainly shown as in experiments recently made by the station at Geneva. Two rations were compounded, each of foods in ordinary use, approximatel? equal in nutritive value, but in one he protein, or nitrogenous material, was supplied wholly from grains with some skim milk, while in the other about two-firths of the protein came from dried blood, animal meal and fresh bone. Upon these rations the Station fed two lots of chicks until they were about five months old, one lot starting at birth and the other at six weeks of age, one pen in each lot receiving the grain ration and the other the meat-meal ration. With each lot the meat fed birds grew faster, reached maturity earlier, ate less food for each pound of grain and produced a pound of gain at less cost. Pullets among the meat-fed birds also began laying four weeks earlier than any among those receiving only vegetable foods. With cockerels fed the contrasted rations the differences in favor of the animal meal were quite marked during the first part of the test but when the birds attained full size and began to fatten the benefit from the meat seemed to cease, showing that its great advantage lies in promoting rapid, healthy growth, not in its fattening power. With ducks the results were even more striking: for the grain fed birds remained stunted, scrawny and feeble, several of them dying before the test ended; while the meat-fed ducklings grew well, remained perfectly healthy and weighed three times as much per bird as the others at the end of ten weeks. Those interested may obtain the full account of the experiments in Bulletin No. 149 of the Station, which a postal card request will secure .- Agricultural Bulletin No. 149, N. Y.

Work in the Vegetable Houses,

Successional planting may still be nade. They will come up more quickly now, the conditions being more favovable to germination than during the dull winter months. On this account less seed need be used, that is providing the seed is good; but if any doubts are entertained as to quality, either test them first, or plant rather thickly to insure against blanks, and thin out to the proper distance just after the young plants are safely through the soil.

For the more advanced batches on which beans are set, if the soil is of poor quality or probably reduced in strength by repeated cropping, frequent applications of liquid manure in not too trong a state will be very benficial; b if the soil is good and rich feeding with not be necessary. If over done it is apt to cause rank growth of stems and leaves rather than quality or size of the bears.

The only insect enemy that is apt to prove troublesome is red spider, which can only be kept down by frequentsyringings on the mornings of bright days. As it is hard to apply the syringe with sufficient force without laying the plants more or less, a few bushy twigs from Beech or other such tree, stuck in through them will prove an easy and efficient means of support.

Though hardy a profitable crop from a market point of view, nevertheless they are as a delicacy often appreciated above their market value when coming from the private garden. American Wonder and Nott's Excelsior, on ac-count of their dwarfness, are the best adapted varieties for growing under glass. Sow, not too thickly, in rows 16 inches apart in moderately rich soil; and once up never allow them to suffer for want of water. A night temperature of from 60 to 65 degrees suits them in in about eight weeks from time of sowing. These, on account of their quickly maturing, are very useful for filling in vate gardens frequent small sowings are the most servicable; with 'arger batches there is danger of waste by running to seed or becoming too large and pithy before they can be used up. There are many varieties that can be forced, but if confined to one I would grow Non Plus Ultra. This should be sown in rows four inches apart, and thinned to an inch apart in rows. The seeds should be covered about half an inch; some give less covering, but we invariably find that the radishes are best when the top of the bulb, when ready to pull, just shows above

My Dear Alf .: - Thanks very much, old boy, for your very welcome letter, which reached me safely yesterday. I was glad to hear from you. You must excuse me, old chap, for not writing you before, as I had to write so many letters before I came away from home, and since that memorable event I have not been such that memorable avent I have not had much time to myself, as we have had to work like Trojans.

Of course you are anxious to know what I think of active service. It is rather different to Easter manoeuvres oughly and completely as money and experience could possibly do it. Even down to our boot-laces everything was of the best quality that money could buy. Our boots, for instance, cost 17s. 6d. per pair, contract price. Of these we had two pairs. Our flannel shirts cost 7s. 6d. each, contract price; so you can imagine that nothing was left undone. Our officers are a thorough set of gentlemen, our adjutant being a very fine chap, and there is not a man in the regiment who would not follow him anywhere. He came to us from the Grenadier Guards and what he doesn't know of soldiering isn't worth knowing.

Well, old chap. I had a fine passage out on the Garth Castle, but it was a out on the Garth Castle, but it was a case of "'oop again, daddy!" the first two or three days on board. We arrived at Cape Town in full time. We were encamped there two weeks to await the arrival of the remainder of the infantry detachment and had a resty pleating the two responses here.

of the infantry detachment and had a very nice time, the townspeople being very hospitable toward us.

On the 20th of February we left Cape Town for Modder River to join Roberts' column, but were dumped down here, as the rebels are all up in arms, and since our arrival raiding resting here made several attempts. parties have made several attempts to blow up the line, but with small success up to date.

Great things have happened lately, haven't they? Kimberley, Cronje, Ladysmith and Bloemfontein. Cronje and all his men passed through here je and all his men passed through here on their way to Cape Town, a motley looking rabble of old men down to boys of 14 and 15 years of age. I have never seen such a villianous looking crowd in my life. Our mounted infantry section have had a lot fighting already being in the fight-crowd in my life. Our mounted infantry section have have had a lot of fighting already, being in the fighting line at Jacobsdal and Paardeburg, where they had several wounded. Paardeburg was a big affair, eh? And great praise is due to the Royal Canadians. Fine fellows they are, and admired by everybody.

They had their chance and made good use of it, and proved that the Canadian Regiment is a good, plucky one, and every bit as useful as the best British regiment. I hear they are going home via London. Won't they get a reception by the cockneys? Canada might well be proud of her men in South Africa.

So far we have not been in any big fight and everybody is getting rather impatient. We have had one or two scraps with rebels, in fact "A" and "G" companies had a stiff time with them at Preska the other day losing six wounded, seven missing and one
