Testimonial

Chatham, Ont., March 30th, 1900

P. S. Coate, Esq.,
Manager The Chatham Gas Co.,
Chatham, Ont.

Dear Sir,—In reply to your letter of the 29th inst. Our gas range has been in use at my house for several years and has always given perfect satisfaction, besides being a great convenience, it has been very economical in fuel, not costing more than one-third the price for wood or coal. I may say it is used for every thing that a stove could be required for and does the work admirably.

Yours truly,
S. F. GARDINER.

The Indian and the Northwest.

A handsomely illustrated book just issued, bound in cloth and containing 115 pages of interesting historical data relating to the settlement of the great Northwest, with fine half-tone engravings of Black Hawk, Sitting Bull, Red Cloud and other noted chiefs; Custer's battle ground and ten colored map plates showing location of the various tribes dating back to 1800. A careful review of the book impresses one that it is a valuable contribution to the history of the early pioneers, and a copy should be in every library.

RULINGS AFFECT CHATHAM CRACK

Joseph Kenny Discusses the Proposed Changes in Rules of Cricket.

"Just a few bowlers in Canada are interested in the proposed change of the rule whereby a batsman is out, leg before, whether the ball pitches in a straight line from wicket to wicket or not, and I am one of them," said Cricketer Joe Kenny. The amendment, voted down in England at the recent representative meeting, was to the effect that, no matter where the ball was pitched, the batsman was out if his leg was in front of the wicket and was hit by the ball.

"During the past few years I myself have experienced the most unjust rulings throughout the district. Batsmen who have deliberately jumped in front of the wicket had defended themselves on the mere technicality that the ball was not pitched straight. I probably have suffered more than other bowlers, because I use a slower ball than a great many of the other Canadian bowlers. McGivern, of Ottawa, is much faster bowler, and he has not suffered so much, but there isn't a break bowler in the country, who is not strenuously objecting.

"The object of the proposed change in the rule is to compel a man to play with his bat and not with his leg, and thus lessen the length of innings."

A. S. Couits, of Tilbury, was in the city yesterday.

James Sterling, of Blenheim, spent yesterday in the city.

Mrs. (Dr.) Galbraith and daughter, of Dresden, are in the city to-day.

The Lake Erie have added four new train signs for the better direction of passengers.

Lord Dunraven's father was godfather to W. E. Hamilton, editor of the Market Guide.

Geo. Sharron, of Big Point, who had his leg broken, and is in St. Joseph's Hospital, is doing nicely.

The contractors are busily engaged fitting up Dr. Rutherford's new office in the McNaughton block, lately purchased by the doctor.

The proprietor of the boarding house at Road Eau, for the men engaged by the Western Ontario Peat Fuel Company, is moving his household effects to-day. The company are shipping cement, gravel, brick, etc., for the foundation of their new works.

M. C. McBrayne, a former Chatham boy, is making rapid strides in his chosen calling, having within the last few days been appointed manager for the city of Detroit of the new $20,000,000 typewriter combine.

Mr. McBrayne when in Chatham was book-keeper of the T. H. Taylor Company (Ltd.) and was prominent in athletic circles. He left Chatham to become travelling representative of the Smith-Premier Company and now has left him the game was stolen, and admitted that the trick might be done without the extra card.

"You thought you could beat Billy Boyd," said Mr. McKay.

"Well, I thought I could this time."

"Who lifted the cards to see if the queen was there?"

"I did."

"Then you cheated yourself. Had you not lifted the cards you would have won."

Potter said that he was going to lay an information against Boyd, but Mr. McKay said that was his business, and he had run up against one fellow who had advised him to keep quiet, or they would all be pulled.

"Would you call Grant's barn a gambling place?" asked Mr. McKay.

"Only from what I saw there on Saturday."

"Couldn't that take place in any house?"

"Yes, but it would be gambling."

"Did you never play cards in a private house for a 10c corner?"

"No, never."

"Never play progressive euchre for a prize?"

"No, I don't know anything about the game."

Soper McKay—"The game hasn't reached Sweden yet." (Laughter.)

Chief Will in the box was asked as to the general reputation of the place, but Mr. McKay objected. However, the question was allowed, and the chief said that the place was known as a gambling place.

"How far is this place from the police office?"

"One block."

"And why didn't you pull the place if you knew there was gambling going on there?"

"I never had any definite ground."

"Did you ever try to raid the place?"

"I went around to see what was going on."

"Whom did you ask about the supposed gambling place?"

"I asked several people."

"Name me one."

"Dr. Rudd."

"Dr. Rudd rents part of the building."

"Why didn't you investigate and lay an information against Boyd? Didn't you know there are warrants out against Boyd by the police of other places?"

In other words why did you jump on Grant and leave the real robber, Boyd, to get away? Is it your intention to lay an information against Boyd?"

"Will you lay informations against the others who were at Grant's on Saturday?"

"You may expect a big grist of them."

"Gen." Grant was convicted by Police Magistrate Field this morning on the charge of allowing gambling in his place on Revere street, but the decision as to penalty was reserved until to-morrow morning. There was a large crowd at the police court to hear the case. The accused was defended by S. G. McKay, and John S. Mackay prosecuted.

Warren Potter, the man who was "caught" in the "General's" place said that he was in General Grant's barn, corner of Revere and Peel sts., on Saturday morning. The "General" was there together with several others. He had met Grant on the street first, when the General started telling him about a card trick that was going on inside. "We went in," said Potter, "and Grant brought his cards out. He took the queen and the jack of hearts, putting the queen in one half of the deck and sending the jack off for a drink, as he called it. Then he laid the jack on top of the queen and following up he laid the other half of the deck on top. Then he shuffled the cards and both jack and queen came out together. There was a big tall fellow there named Boyd. He ripped off a few oaths and offered to bet the drinks that he could do the trick. Boyd then played the same trick as the 'General.' He sent the jack off to get a drink. He was supposed to bring the card back but in the meantime the 'General' had slipped a card on the deck in with the other two. This prevented the cards coming out together."

Potter bet $10 that the queen of hearts would not be found at the bottom. Boyd and the others took it up. "I put up my $10," said Potter, "and Boyd put up a bill. Grant held the stakes. I lifted up the cards and, behold, the queen of hearts was there. I had lost."

Mr. Soper McKay—"Were you ever at Grant's place before?"

Potter—"Yes."

"Did you ever engage in a game of chance there?"

"No, but I've seen trick games played there."

S. G. McKay conducted an interesting cross-examination of Potter.

"You were rather easy on this occasion?" suggested Mr. McKay.

"You're not Mr. Potter of Texas?"

"No, I'm not, I'm a hick from here."

"Did you ever meet Boyd before?"

"No."

"Would you be surprised to know that you were just as culpable as Boyd in this game?"

"Perhaps I was."

"Will you plead guilty if an information is laid against you?"

"I might."

"Then we'll lay an information against you afterwards."

Potter wouldn't swear that the card which lost him the game was stolen, and admitted that the trick might be done without the extra card.

"You thought you could beat Billy Boyd," said Mr. McKay.

"Well, I thought I could this time."

"Who lifted the cards to see if the queen was there?"

duty in not raiding this place before."

"I never like to raid a place unless I have a sure case," replied the chief.

S. G. McKay urged that there was no case against Grant, and argued that the charge was ultra vires of the municipal by-laws; that the council had no power to pass such a by-law as the one on which the charge was based. The act didn't allow the council to pass by-laws suppressing games of chance. As to the evidence there must be more than an isolated act to show that the place was a gambling house. If it was not a gambling house on the evidence conviction must fail. Mr. McKay announced that he would offer no evidence for the defence.

Soper McKay made a strong charge against the accused, and the magistrate said that on the evidence he would have to convict. However, he would think over the question of penalty, and give judgment to-morrow morning.

Wm. Gray & Sons have Contracted for a Large Warehouse at the Capital.

The following is taken from the Ottawa Free Press of Saturday, May 11th:

Messrs. Wm. Gray & Sons, the extensive carriage and wagon manufacturers of Chatham, Ont., have closed a lease for a term of years for a large new brick warehouse on the south side of Sparks street, adjacent to the Massey-Harris building. The property has been leased from Mayor Morris and Messrs. Alex. and David MacLaren. The building, which will be brick, two story high and in dimensions 25 by 85, will be completed by September. It will be used as a salesroom. Mr. Engram, of Chatham, will be in charge of the Ottawa branch.

In an interview with The Planet, Wm. Gray & Sons said:—"In order to take care of our trade north of Ottawa, which is increasing, we have got to have a repository in Ottawa. Our intention is to carry a large stock there in order to give prompt service."
