On Life's Voyage.

As on the stream of life you float, Let Truth be helmsman of your boat, Let Hope as ballast in all gales; Though tempests roar, and billows roll, If Faith be anchor of your soul, If to God in prayer you cast, His Love will hold 'gainst every blast; And when you reach the port above You'll find the Rock of Ages, Love.

Sweet Words.

"My dearest of mothers," I heard the words repeated in soft tones by my next-door neighbor at an island farm-house where we are sojourning. "My dearest of mothers." My friend was a widow, and her son, an affectionate, talented fellow, was engineering in Idaho.

The farmer prepared the leather from skins which had lain in the vat for a year, and his wife made ready the cloth. Spinning-wheels buzzed from morn till night. Skins of woollen and linen yarn hung on the walls of every house.

The home days were over. The ladies with their sweet ways, their joy-giving and their trouble making, had grown to noisy boys, then to self-asserting men; they were out in the world making their way; brains busy, thoughts absorbed, hearts full; yet here was one who remembered the mother, still in middle life, loving and needing love the same as when her boys were very own in the dear child's home.

Life is a little chilly to the mothers whose homes are the things of the past. Even if they remain in the old home, the rooms seem very bare and silent after the children are gone. It is as if summer had flown, with its nests and bird songs, and autumn winds were blowing. Then the love of the sons and daughters is like sunshine, or warm fires to the hearts that sadly miss them. Let us hope there are many sons who write, "My dearest of mothers."

The story of the terrible tragedy which occurred many years ago at the Pemberton Mills has been most dramatically and simply told by a well-known author. Her quiet account of the loss of life under the fallen and burning building can scarcely be read without bringing tears, especially when one reaches the end, where the dying lift their voices in the hymn, "We're Going Home to Die No More."

Importation of Eggs.

In 1874 the Unit & Stat imported about five million dozens of eggs, but in 1885 the quantity had increased to sixteen million dozens, representing a money value of two and a half millions of dollars, every penny of which had to be paid in gold coin. At this rate of increase would pay to foreign countries during fifty years, for the single item of eggs an amount more than equal to the present national debt.

The doctor and nurse stood transfixed. The other patients in the silent, darkened room, leaned on their elbows and drank in the sweet melody. The first verse completed, her strength began to fail, and with it her voice, and only the humming-like distant music of the air of the hymn could be heard. That ceased, she heaved a sigh, and all was over.

Preparing for Winter.

While it is the duty for every farmer to provide for the proper care of his animals, in the line of suitable protection and furnishing a supply of suitable food, he should not forget the obligations to his family. The home should be provided with all the necessities, and as many luxuries as possible which will serve to strengthen and invigorate the body, but there should also be provision for the development and strengthening of the mind.

The Saloon's Victims.

Yet, though this institution brutalizes and degrades men, and increases the friction of all progressive effort immensely, the suffering which it entails upon women is heavier and keener, says a writer in the Atlantic for January. The maternal grief involved is but one phase of the subject. If the saloon wrecks thousands of lives and homes, its victims go to ruin with paralyzed sensibilities; and when they are inflicting most pain upon those who love them they are least capable of realizing the truth. The liquor whose habitual use dulls all the faculties, extinguishes conscience, and a self-respect in the course of its destructive work, and the hardened drinker will sacrifice everything to his master passion without scruple or hesitation. But the women who are doomed to bear the heavy burden of relationship to drunkards are indeed to be pitied. The domestic pity from which few of them can escape, forces upon them perpetual experiences so heart-breaking, so revolting, that their existence is a prolonged tragedy.

Somebody has condensed the mistakes of life, and arrived at the conclusion that there are fourteen of them. Most people would say, if they told the truth, that there was no limit to the mistakes of life; that they were like the drops in the ocean or the sands on the shore in numbers, but living man chained to a corpse is not more terribly situated than the wives and daughters of the saloon's victims. Liquor eliminates all the drunkard's good qualities, reinforces all his worst vices, and, having thus transformed him, sends him home to torture and abuse those whom it is his first duty to cherish and protect.

Overworked Women.

Prior to the American Revolution every colonial farmhouse and every blacksmith's shop was a manufactory. For everything was literally manufactured, that is, made by hand. The blacksmith hammered out axes, hoes, forks, spades, ploughshares, scythes, and nails. A tailor went from house to house to make up the winter clothing, and was followed by the shoemaker.

The women whose "work was never done," not only carded, spun and wove but they milked the cows, made butter, bread, and cheese, soap and candles, cooked the food, did the washing, and in the harvest raked hay, pulled flax, and dug potatoes.

The neighbor, who happened in for an afternoon's gossip, brought her work from a New York hospital, from which an ambulance had been called to the relief of a burned child.

She had been sent by her parents to the cellar for firewood, and in descending she stumbled and dropped the lamp, which exploded and set her clothing on fire. The surgeon wrapped the poor, crisped, writhing form of the child in what is known as a "prepared sheet," and told the driver to get to the hospital quickly.

There all was done for her that science could do, but it was impossible to save her life. A narcotic was given to her, and she fell asleep. Waking after some hours, she asked for water. The nurse immediately called the doctor. In a minute he was beside the cot. He felt the pulse, ominously shook his head, gave some more instructions, and turned to go away. As he did so, the little creature turned half round. The dim light of a candle shone on the blackened face. The swollen lips pursed out, and, in a clear, sweet voice, the dying child began to sing the hymn "Nearer, my God, to Thee."

It is well to be accurate. Here, then, are fourteen great mistakes: It is a; read; mistake to set up our own standard of right and wrong; and judge people accordingly; to measure the enjoyment of others by our own; to expect uniformity of opinion in this world; to look for judgment and experience in youth; to endeavor to mould all dispositions alike; not to yield to immaterial trifles; to look for perfection in our own actions; to work by compulsion and others with what cannot be remedied, and not to alleviate all that needs alleviation as lies in our power; not to make allowances for others; to consider everything impossible that we cannot perform; to believe only what our finite minds can grasp; to expect to be able to understand everything.

What True Merit will do.

The unprecedented sale of Boschee's German Syrup within a few years, has astonished the world. It is without doubt the safest and best remedy ever discovered for the speedy and effectual cure of Coughs, Colds and the severest Lung troubles. It acts upon an entirely different principle from the usual prescriptions given by Physicians, as it does not dry up a Cough and leave the disease still in the system, but on the contrary removes the cause of the trouble, heals the parts affected and leaves them in a purely healthy condition. A bottle kept in the house for use when the diseases make their appearance, will save doctor's bills and a long spell of serious illness. A trial will convince you of these facts. It is positively sold by all druggists and general dealers in the land. Price, 75 cts., large bottles.

STILL ANOTHER.

MESSRS. C. C. RICHARDS & Co., Gentlemen, - We consider Minard's Liniment the best value of any in the Market, and cheerfully recommend its use. Dr. J. H. HARRIS, Bellevue Hospital.
