Tomorrow afternoon the closing exercises of the schools will be held and the event should be attended by as many village people as possible. Several prizes and a medal offered for good work stimulated a good deal of interest and the competition for them has been keen.

A number of public spirited young men of the village are engaged in fixing up the "village green" into the best base-ball diamond on the river and at a general recreation ground. The work is most commendable. The young men interested are giving their services gratuitously, but the monetary expense goes well over $100. This, it is expected, will be cheerfully borne by the village people when it is shown how beneficial a suitable recreation ground will prove to be.

Hartland Hotel to Close.

Owing to the difficulty of securing competent help and to illness in my family, I am compelled to close to the public on July 1 the dining room of the Exchange Hotel. I will still let rooms and can give good accommodation and will also conduct the stable as usual. Those who take rooms can get good meals at a restaurant just across the street.

Regretting that my efforts to maintain the right help have failed and thanking the public for the patronage extended to me during the time I have run the hotel, I am

Yours truly,
ZIBA ORSER.

EVERYBODY RAGS.

EVERYBODY'S started ragging. They rag at every hall. They do the ragging. The ragging dip and all. Mother's got the ragging. And so has sister Ann. Everybody rags at our house. Even our old man.

Now, Brother Bill went ragging. And stayed away from school. Their professor told him. It was against the rule. But now professor's got it. And so has teacher too. Everybody's going crazy. What shall we do?

Some scientist may tell us. A microbe it must be. The easy to believe him. For a learned man is he. Until you start to thinking. That perhaps he's ragging too. And keep his feet a-ragging. Just like me and you.

Now, if you keep on ragging. From morn till close of day. You'll rag into the hospital. The good old doc will say. But every Thursday evening. Just as regular as a clock. You'll find him at some rag dance. The dear old doc!

Everybody rags for breakfast. For lunch and dinner too. They go to work a-ragging. And rag the whole day through. They drive a rag machine. I can't go any further. For I'm out of ragging. For I'm out of ragging. For I'm out of ragging.

—A. B. Cheney in Los Angeles Times.

The Better the Deed.
He was a colonel of the old school, a veritable Lord Chesterfield. Though suffering from chronic financial embarrassment, he could always find the proverbial friend in need.

Meeting an old comrade one day, he asked the loan of $5. "I shall need it for a short time only," a tradesman has grown rather impatient," he said. His friend had not $5 in change, but gladly pressed a ten dollar bill upon him.

The colonel expressed his thanks, then asked, "And how is your charming wife today?"

"Not at all well, I am sorry to say," was the answer.

"And no appetite, I'll venture. Perhaps some of these bichrome grapes may tempt her."

Whereupon he stopped at a nearby stand, purchased a basket of fruit, paid $5 the dealer asked out of his newly acquired $10 and walked jauntily to the gate of his friend's home, carrying the basket.—New York Post.

Teacher's Interest.

"The schoolteacher is interested in you, dad."

"How's that?"

"Why, today, after she'd told me six times to sit down and behave myself, she said she wondered what kind of a father I had."—Philadelphia Ledger.

No Chances to Agree.

"Why do you reject me?"

"I am sure that we can never be happy. We should spend our entire married life quarreling. It is better that you should suffer the pain of parting now than to endure a lifetime of misery."

"But what makes you think we should quarrel? I will do everything in my power to please you."

"I know that, but I am sure that we could never get along."

"Why not?"

"We learned the hesitation waits from different dancing teachers."—Detroit Free Press.

Margely Coy.

"That booby made a bluff at kissing me last night and then quit."

"But, he says you scratched his face, blackened his eye and stabbed him with a batpin."

"Well, a girl has to put up a little maidenly resistance."—Kansas City Journal.
