THE VALLEY BROOK.

[The following is from the pen of JOHN HOWAR BRYANT brother of W. C. BRYANT.]

Fresh from the fountains of the wood, A rivulet of the valley came And glided on for many a rood, Flushed with the morning's ruddy flame.

The air was fresh, and soft; and sweet, The slopes in spring's, new verdure lay, And wet with dew-drops at my feet, Bloomed the young violets of May.

When this simple and retreshing movining only was performed. Any returned towards the vittage. See or white Indian renegade?—why your life are I think nobody tell do it?—what are marry Simon Girly, or hand, and had fallen into a very deep reverse, when a shrick from the child alarmed her, and she booked up.

'Indian,' said Amy Moss, wildly clutching his arm.

The young chief, who had originally made her a prisoner, stood before her.

If o was a tall and rather handsome Indian, with a superssion of countenance which, at the present moment, was mild and gentle. He was a tall and gentle. He was a tall and gentle. He was a tall and rather handsome Indian, with a superssion of countenance which, at the present moment, was mild and gentle. He was a tall and gentle. He was a tall and gentle. He was a tall and gentle was mild and gentle was mild and gentle was a tall and gentle was a t expression of countenance which, at the presen moment, was mid and gentle. He wore a kind of the word of the badgers' hairs, with the beak and claws of buzzard, and on his blanket were after brooches and coins to indicate his bravery of ornament. He was wholly unarmed.

"Tecumseh is glad,' he said in a soft, low and melancholy voice—for this man was an adept in the ways and arts of elequence, which oft depends as much on voice and manners as on words—the sight of the nightingal is good. The air is fresh, and there are roses on the white hly's cheeks. Go, Wass, take the little pale-skin. Tecumseh will speak with the daughter of the Long knives."
