Largest Telescope
in the World.

Will Bring 1,000,000,000 New Stars in Sight.
The largest telescope in the world is being completed at Mount Wilson Observatory in Southern California. This telescope is 250,000 times more powerful than the human eye, and will enable astronomers to see a thousand million new stars, and they hope with its help to find out the limits of the universe.
The gigantic reflector is 100 inches across, and weighs 4 1/2 tons.
When the telescope is finished it will be placed in a steel structure covered by a revolving dome measuring 400 feet in diameter and weighing 500 tons.
The concrete base on which the telescope is to rest weighs 200 tons, and the worm wheel which turns the shaft weighs 7,000 pounds, and has a diameter of 17 feet.
There are photographic dark rooms where plates are developed, and a midnight dining room attached to the structure for the convenience of astronomers. The public will be able to view this enormous telescope through a glass-walled room, so that the work of the astronomers will not be interfered with.—Pearson's Weekly.
