THE TURF.

THE IDOL OF THE TRACKS. Anyone who doubted that there was real sentiment about horse racing might have been convinced of his mistake had he gone to the Washington ing 134 pounds and winning the Great an odds-on favorite. Track Western handicap over a mile and a Summary: half route against the pick of western and good wishes of every true sportsman among the 10,000 spectators. And Time, :56%. that a majority of the spectators had such sentiment was apparent by the talk in advance of and after the race wherever one might be in the crowd. There was but one wish-except on the part of a few. That was that McChes- | Mack, 15 to 1, 3. Time, 1:04. ney might win. Not one person in 50 at the track had a bet on the great horse, many refraining from wagering because they doubted if even the champion could do what he was being asked to do, and others because the odds were altogether too unremunerative. Yet 49 out of every 50 who saw the race would have rejoiced to see McChesney win. McChesney is now owned by a New Yorker, and while his trainer has won the respect of racegoers it was the feeling for the horse himself more than anything else that caused the great crowd to hope for his success. But McChesney's defeat did not lower him in public estimation. He is still easily the greatest American racenorse, and in his present form would defeat at even weights any horse which had been seen east or west in several years. BRIGHTON BEACH RACES. New York, July 10.—The card offered at the Brighton Beach today was very ordinary, and the public had a bad day. As the racing season advances the trainers who have charge of the crack trotters and pacers are making ready for the Grand Circuit that opens at Detroit on July 20. The Blue Ribbon meeting at the famous Grosse Pointe track attracts the fastest horses in the land, so that this great racing carnival never fails to furnish the best of sport. There are no other events along the Grand Circuit attracting such attention as the Merchants' and Manufacturers' stake for trotters and the Chamber of Commerce stake for pacers. These two annual fixtures are the best known and most eagerly sought of any in America. LACROSSE.

GOT A BLACK EYE. Professional lacrosse got a black eye in the Minto Cup competition at Montreal, says the Stratford Beacon. The Brantfords, "a team of adventurers gathered from the highways and byeways," as the Montreal Gazette properly describes them, entered the lists diers; J. Duff Stuart, of the Sixth D. against the Shamrocks. The Irishmen toyed with the visitors in the first dripping footgear, carefully graduated in game, presumably to increase the gate receipts, and the hopes of the Branttheir work and the Brantfords were invisible. No sympathy is due Brantford for its defeat. The leading spirits behind that club are largely responsant their grandfather's, Mr. William ible for killing amateur lacrosse in this Dagg's. It is to the credit of Stratford that it never descended to professionalism in either lacrosse or the championship of the Canadian Lacrosse Association with a purely local the championship of the Canadian La-crosse Association with a purely local amateur team, and it would have been in the game this year were it not that it declined to compete with profession-al teams. We hope the lesson taught Brantford may have the effect of killing professionalism as effectively as it has killed amateurism, and that

Injustice to Animals. "As stupid as a donkey." When one boy tells nother not to make "an ass" of himself, or says that the other is as stupid as "a donkey" or as obstinate as "a mule," he does not mean the remark for a compliment, and the other boy never accepts it for one. But is was defeated by the Carletons on the donkey realiy a stupid animal, is Thursday evening, 9 to 1. The game the ass anything like so great a fool as the human being who is supposed to behave like an ass, and is the mule only obstinate or has he a "firm char- 121/2. acter?" He will tell you at once that the little animal is as Third race, 5 furlongs—Scalper, 5 to delphia, and the forearm from the intelligent a creature of its class as 1; Ingoldthrift, 3 to 1, 2; Tottsey elbow to the wrist has turned black. seem to show a contempt for the human understanding by not always caring to do what a human being asks of them, but make a donkey love you and you will find him docile enough, There are stupid donkeys and intelligent donkeys, as there are stupid and intelligent horses, dogs, and-persons An ass has never been known to do anything so absolutely silly as to make it excusable to give the poor creature the bad name he has borne for ages. He is patient. He is long suffering.

Much abuse makes him appear indifferent to the treatment he receives. It is however, a little too unjust to suppose that he is originally stupid because his inhuman master is cruel. "As silly as a goose."-What is there particularly silly about a goose? Does it follow its animal instincts in caring for itself and its young? Before you accept the adage about a goose's silliness watch it for yourself. The common barnyard geese need not be ashamed to be studied with the ducks and the chickens of the poultry house; they bear the comparison very well indeed. The wild geese, however, which never associate with human beings in or about a barnyard, are remarkably intelligent birds. No one is called "as silly as a wild goose," while to lead any one "a wild goose chase" is to lead him one knows not where, so cunning is the bird in its strong, untrapped flight. "As wise as an owl."-If ever the ap pearance of wisdom was mistaken for the quality it is the extraordinary in-Batteries-Laroy, Hooker, Ferry and telligence attributed to the owl. Why aporte; Winham and McCauley. Umpire is it, do you suppose, that the owl looks so much wiser than other birds, not to particularize some other animals? Science can tell you the reason. In the frontal bones over the brain of the owl is an immense number of air cells. They give the forehead that imposing appearance which has commanded the respect of human beings from the days of the worship of Minerva down to the more prosaic present To look wise when one makes as little fuss and noise as the owl is no mean accomplishment. Looking wise and being generally silent is one way to make yourself respected. It may make you rather tiresome in general company, but think how much more tiresome you are if too noisy! The quiet of the owl is an example some poisterous young people might do well to imitate. It has a wisdom quite its

THE cheapest, because it burns less fuel than any other-it's the quantity of fuel a furnace consumes, which makes it cheap or expensive; not

Lasts longer than any other, because all parts exposed to fire and wear are made extra heavy and put together by skilled artisans. The cleanest, because the ashpan is large and catches all the ashes—you never have a mess of ashes The easiest to take care of, because it is simply constructed—any boy can attend to it.

Sold by all enterprising dealers. Booklet free.
