MARRIED THEIR MAIDS.
 Servants Who Have Found Fortune at the Altar.
 Cupid is notoriously no respecter of persons; and if, in a mischievous mood, he makes a master succumb to the charms of his maidservant to the extent of putting a wedding-ring on her finger, he can at least boast that he has made many a happy union out of much more incongruous material: for the "wicked little god" thinks nothing of mating a prince with a peasant or a nobleman with a "Miss Nobody."
 Sir Gervase Clifton wanted little help from Cupid when he wooed the first of his many wives; for among his domestics was a pretty, blue-eyed maid who satisfied his ideal of the beauty and virtues he sought in a wife. And the wedded life that followed his nuptials proved so happy that for the rest of his days he never went a-wooing outside his own circle of domestic. One maidservant after another graduated in turn as My Lady Clifton, until number seven survived to smooth the pillow of his deathbed.
 And so it has been in many cases. The maid has made an excellent wife to the master. There was never a more loyal or beloved spouse than Elizabeth Starkey, maid-of-all-work, red-armed and rosy-cheeked, whom Thomas Coult, the rich banker of the Strand, promoted from the kitchen to the drawing-room. And her virtues were transmitted to her three daughters, who found husbands respectively in the Marquess of Bute, the Earl of Guilford, and Francis Burdett.
 George Stephenson, the father of the railway, never did a better day's work in his life than when he gave his name to "Fanny" Henderson, domestic servant, whose life-achievement was summed up in this testimonial: "The bearer, Frances Henderson, is a girl of sober disposition, an honest servant, and of a good family; as witness my hand.—George Alder." It was "Fanny" who became the mother of the famous Robert Stephenson; and when, after a too-brief wedded life, she left her husband desolate, he found consolation in the affection of Elizabeth Hindmarsh, farmer's daughter and housemaid.
 Shortly before George Stephenson won his maid-of-all-work, John Crossley, of Halifax, had made a wife of Martha Tutner, who ruled over a Yorkshire kitchen, and, thus unknowingly, laid the foundation of an enormous fortune. Martha's domestic services were assessed at $30 a year; but she soon proved worth much more than that to her carpet-weaving husband.
 In later years she confessed, "I used to get up at four o'clock in the morning to stitch carpets and had usually earned two shillings by the time my neighbors were coming downstairs." These were the "days of small things"; but Martha, thanks to her clever brain and industrious hands, lived to see "her John" head of one of the greatest carpet-weaving firms in the world, with more than $5,000,000 at his back. Her fifth son became a baronet, and her grandson is known to-day as the Right Hon. Sir Savile Crossley, Bart., K.C.V.O.

Apiary Notes.
 Don't use sulphuric acid for cleaning beeswax, because it will burn the comb and take the substance out of it to such an extent that the bees will not work upon it.
 Bees won't thrive in a cellar where there are mice or any disturbing influences. It is well to partition bees off to themselves where it is quiet, with plenty of ventilation and little light.
 During spring manipulations, in preparing bees for winter and at other times it may be necessary to feed them for stimulation or to provide stores. Honey from an unknown source should never be used for fear of introducing disease.
 The first thing to be looked after in making a bee cellar would be the location. This should be in a side hill or knoll sloping to the south where the soil is gravel or sandy loam. By digging into the bank a cellar of sufficient size to hold the number of colonies comfortably can be secured.
 A curious interference on the part of the honeybees in our economic questions has occurred in the tobacco raising sections of the country. They are gathering nectar from the tobacco blossoms, and some of the apiarists complain that the honey is flavored in a way that is neither delightful nor wholesome.

MAKING CHARCOAL FOR HOGS.
 Helps Wonderfully in Keeping the Animals in Good Condition.
 When hogs are being fed corn they have insatiable appetites for charcoal, and this goes to show that the charcoal meets some requirement of the animal system. What is palatable seldom does the system any injury, and then only when taken in excess, which it is likely to be if the animals are not accustomed to it, especially if they are hungry. The fact that hogs when on full feed of corn eat all forms of charcoal with avidity and never get too much of it is sufficient grounds for providing it in abundance and keeping it within reach of the hogs at all times.
 I utilize all the corncobs on my place for making charcoal to feed my hogs, says an Iowa Homestead correspondent. I dig a pit about five feet deep, which is smaller at the bottom than at the top, in which to burn the cobs. I start a fire at the bottom and gradually fill with cobs, then cover the pit with a sheet iron lid. Earth may be used in covering the pit if a large lid is not available. In about twelve hours the combustion has produced an exceedingly good grade of corncob charcoal.
 In feeding the charcoal I make up the following mixture: Five bushels of corncob charcoal, one bushel of wood ashes, eight pounds of salt, two quarts of air slaked lime, two pounds of sulphur and a pound of coppers. I break up the charcoal, mix all thoroughly together, put the mixture in self feeding boxes and place where the hogs can have free access to it. This combination furnishes a good percentage of ash for bone building, destroys worms and helps wonderfully in keeping the hogs in a thrifty condition. The amount of charcoal that a bunch of hogs will eat during the winter if given free access to it at all times is really very surprising.

CONVENIENT DAIRY HOUSE.
 Place For Handling Milk, Cream and Butter in a Sanitary Manner.
 Every dairyman selling milk to a creamery or cheese factory or city trader or making dairy butter on his farm should have a sanitary dairy house. This building should be separate from the stable and other buildings on the farm and should be well supplied with water. Milk for any purpose must be kept in a clean, well ventilated place.
 Solid concrete dairy houses, such as are found on the large dairy farms, are to be recommended. A building 12 by 14 feet is large enough for a herd of twenty to twenty-five cows. The accompanying floor plan illustrates trates a very convenient farmers' dairy house. The size of the rooms may be varied to suit the individual needs. A concrete tank near the pump makes cooling of the milk convenient. The separator should be located in the same room. A room provided with a sink and rack can be located at one end of the building. This room should be used exclusively for washing and drying cans and bottles. A room with shelves suitable for storing milk should be partitioned off from the opposite end of the building.

 The walls and floor of the dairy house should be of solid re-enforced concrete. The roof can be of roofing paper or shingles.
 The cost of such a building need not exceed $185, varying according to the size of the herd.—Kimball's Dairy Farmer.

OVER-WORKED KIDNEYS
 Cause. Rush of Blood, Fullness, Dizziness.

J. T. Chetland, the well-known railway engineer of Hamilton, found the strain always resting upon men of his occupation vastly intensified by a tendency of the blood to rush to his head, and often at times when clearness of vision and great steadiness were demanded. Finding some difficulty in bending—a stiffness with pain having settled in his back, it occurred to him that his kidneys might be at fault. "This was a happy idea, for by it I not only got rid of the pain, but many other troubles as well. I took a full dose of Dr. Hamilton's Pills and was glad to note that some obstruction of the kidneys, which I had lately noticed, was at once relieved. The flushed appearance of my face gave way to a more rational color and there was a perceptible improvement in my appetite. Dr. Hamilton's Pills certainly act splendidly upon the blood, removing heat and fullness and that sort of dizziness that makes a man at the throttle wish when it seizes him that he were elsewhere."
 No medicine gives such unquestionably good results for stomach, liver, and blood troubles as Dr. Hamilton's Pills; they are mild, certain, and always curative. Refuse any substitute.

The Titanic Accident Policies.
 One of the most remarkable sequels of the Titanic disaster is the prompt payment of losses by the marine insurance companies. Foreign financial journals are loud in their praise of the rapidity of adjustment and the full payment of all claims, which was quite unexpected. Like her builders and owners, the insurance companies thought that the Titanic was unsinkable, and so permitted applicants for insurance almost to write their own policies. The Titanic was sunk, with enormous loss, but the insurance companies, notwithstanding the question of the stability of some of them and the fact that they had previously suffered severe losses in the disasters of the Delhi and Indiana, survive and are doing business as usual. It is a matter of sincere congratulation that it has been possible to do all this without an outward sign of distress.
