

statutes passed in Great Britain in 1910, 21 have been selected as "statutes of practical utility" applicable to the United Kingdom, England or London.

The Annual Digest. London: Sweet & Maxwell, Limited, 3 Chancery Lane; Stevens & Sons, Limited, 119 and 120 Chancery Lane, Law Publishers. 1911.

This volume includes all the reports of the decisions of the Superior Courts of England, with a selection from the Scottish and Irish cases. It contains also a collection of cases followed, distinguished, explained, commented on, overruled or questioned with reference to the statutes passed during the year 1910. With a view to facilitate the noting-up of these cases there is given a note of the cases printed on one side only for cutting up.

Stone's Justices' Manual for 1911. 43rd edition. By J. R. ROBERTS, Esq., Solicitor, Clerk to the Justice, etc. London: Shaw & Sons, 7 and 8 Fetter Lane; Butterworth & Co., 11 and 12 Bell Yard, Temple Bar, Law Publishers. 1911.

It is only necessary to call attention to the fact that another edition of this Manual has been issued. It is indispensable to magistrates and practitioners in England; and contains much that is useful to the same classes in this country. It has now grown to a book of 1471 pages.

Flotsam and Jetsam.

The law does not consist in particular instances, though it is explained by particular instances and rules, but the law consists of principles, which govern specific and individual cases, as they happen to arise.—Lord Mansfield, R. v. Bembridge (1783) 22 How. St. Tr. 155.

Law grows, and though the principles of law remain unchanged, yet (and it is one of the advantages of the common law) their application is to be changed with the changing circumstances of the times. Some persons may call this retrogression, I call it progress in of human opinion.—Lord Coleridge, Reg. v. Ramsay (1883) 1 Cababe and Ell' ' Q.B.D. Rep. 135.
