

a medicine, or doctor, or some old person; but it's a man's work, you observe, see that his watch, an watch, an watch, an watch, did him some good. Well, here's another; it's a fair line, an line close by the secret, so no doubt it's some honest friend that keeps near, an's muckle thought of. An this third line, ah! look there, my lord; dima ye see it's the secret keeper, an's muckle thought of them; it's no straight, like the tithers, put winds itself round the spot, as it 'twad' an' it, like a serpent strangling its ain young; an' look ye, man, there's somethin' aboon it, just for a' the world like a crown on the head o' it.

Here the earl showed some signs of uneasiness, and made a motion to withdraw his hand.

"Bide a wee, bide a wee; an no done yet," said Nell. "An here's the fifth; it runs like a serpent and the serpent and the red spot, an' signifies that it wudna suffer any injury to bein' it, for some reason or tither, for its ain sake may be; who kens? An here's another said fared lookin' thing, that's carried up into the air, an' keeps eye lookin' an' watchin', but dima interiere muckle aween them, though it could stretch itself, ye see, an' mak itself troublesome to bath, gin it was sair disturbed."

"Enough," exclaimed Leicester, at length withdrawing his hand; "I see thy palmistry hath cost thee some study and research; and yet, methinks, had one of myquires given thee his hand, thou mightst have discerned the same lines in it."

"He, ha! who kens?" again repeated Nell; "but he wudna catch the meanin' sae soon's his master."

"Thou hadst an apt instructor, doubtless," "Ay, twa o' them."

"Two of them?" exclaimed the earl, somewhat started in spite of his precaution. "Their names?"

"The Duke o' Richmond an' his god-mither."

"The Duke o' Richmond in England."

"Weel, weel, bide a wee, bide a wee; time maun tell," cried Nell; and she peremptorily waved him off, without further explanation.

CHAPTER XXXII.

When Sir Geoffrey alighted in front of Brockton Hall, his first look was turned to the grated window of the cell in which he still supposed Alice was confined. He took his hand playfully, and signed to her that he was just hurrying off to open her prison door, and set her free. Indeed, an instant was he on her liberation, and so preoccupied with the thought of again embracing her after so long an absence, that he perceived not his hat had fallen in his descent from the horse, and that he was then hastening on, bareheaded, through a crowd of gaping servants assembled at the door to receive him. Even when one of them, more considerate than the rest, followed the old man, and pressed his well-worn hat down upon his head, he seemed not to notice it, but ambled away quite unconscious of the attention.

The peevish old cripples, also, who had hobbled up the steps on their crutches to receive their customary dole, and ranged themselves, in the order of seniority, on either side of the porch, were, to their no small astonishment, passed by unnoted.

On entering the hall, after leaving his horse in the stable and removing his morion and moustache, Biddy found his fellow-servants conversing, in low, earnest whispers, about their master, and confidently expressing to each other their conviction of his insanity. The abstracted manner and disordered appearance of the knight, combined with the exaggerated notions they had already conceived of him, led them, no doubt, to believe that he had actually run mad at last. THE RESULTS.

To the Editor of THE TRUE WITNESS and THE WITNESS. Sir,—Your remarks in last week's issue, regarding the barkings of your evangelical contemporary against the Jesuits, has recalled to my mind an interesting little sketch of the Jesuit mission at Tadoussac in the early days of the colony, which I read not long since, and the record of the daily lives of those devoted men, as portrayed by a venerable Father of the Society, is of a nature to accentuate the indignation which all Catholics justly feel towards the traducers of the illustrious order of St. Ignatius.

A discussion is now being carried on, as you are no doubt aware, in the French press, and in the English columns of our newspapers, regarding the Jesuits, and the results of the Jesuit mission at Tadoussac in the early days of the colony, which I read not long since, and the record of the daily lives of those devoted men, as portrayed by a venerable Father of the Society, is of a nature to accentuate the indignation which all Catholics justly feel towards the traducers of the illustrious order of St. Ignatius.

brethren of to-day that they brought their troubles on themselves by an excess of religious zeal. The Jesuits despised no sacred no ordeal, however repugnant to weak human nature; they came to win souls to God. While they thankfully accepted from their savage hosts and pupils roasting meat and disgusting stews, let us, wise children of our generation, marry sin gastroscopic lyrics in honor of unclean bivouacs, and the other good things of our day, in which we delight to indulge. While they, surrounded by well-nigh insuperable difficulties and exasperating distractions, laboriously wrote annals which to day are of priceless value, and which we do not disdain to consult in order to acquire renown as historians; let us gaily dash off pompous odes to great the advent of disreputable wandering players, whose damaged reputations and most unwelcome antecedents forever banish them from the pale of respectability.

While the Jesuits, with heaven-inspired generosity, gave their talents, their labor, and their lives for the formation and well-being of the colony, let us, with patriotic ardor, give joy to their most implacable enemies (and our own for that matter) by covert users and open disparagement. While they labored innocently wherever good was to be accomplished, yet we shall ever look upon them as oratory intriguers, thirsting to usurp civil power. When their martyrs are extolled, let us, with colossal puerility, protest that colonists were also massacred, therefore the Jesuits shall not be honored. We may from time to time award to them a puny meed of praise, in order that we may acquire the right to censure them, and when our patriotic labors shall have been brought to a close, perhaps the Royal Society of Canada may graciously accord to us an academic crown. THE GREAT DR. DIO LEWIS His Outspoken Opinion.

The very marked testimonials from College Professors, respectable Physicians, and other gentlemen of intelligence and character to the value of Warner's SAFE Cure published in the editorial columns of our best newspapers, have greatly surprised me. Many of these gentlemen I know, and reading their testimony I was impelled to purchase some bottles of Warner's SAFE Cure and analyze it. Besides, I took some, swallowing three times the prescribed quantity. I am satisfied the medicine is not injurious, and will frankly admit that I found myself the victim of a serious kidney trouble I should use this preparation. The truth is the medical profession stands dumb and he piers in the presence of more than one kidney malady, while the testimony of hundreds of intelligent and very reputable gentlemen hardly leaves room to doubt that Mr. H. H. Warner has fallen upon one of those happy discoveries which occasionally bring help to suffering humanity.

T. PARNELL BANQUET

A National Tribute to the Irish Leader—Mr. Parnell's Speech a Scathing Rebuke to the Powers that be—Opinions of the Press.

DUBLIN, Dec. 11.—The banquet given tonight in the Rotunda at which the national tribute was presented to Parnell, was attended by persons from all parts of Ireland and Great Britain. Five hundred and eighty tickets to the banquet had been sold. Great precautions were taken to prevent any but members of the National League from entering. Lord Mayor Dawson presided. The address accompanying the tribute presented to Parnell was enclosed in an imperial quarto album, with richly carved book-covers studded in silver, wrought book-ornaments and other appropriate ornaments. The illuminations of the album include pictures of Avondale mansion, Parnell's family arm, family miniatures painted, and the borders of the illuminated pages are inscribed in the style of the best Irish manuscript. The album is enclosed in a richly wrought oxidized silver case of elaborate workmanship. The device and designs are the work of Henry O'Shea, of Limerick, and the expense incurred therefor was £100.

THE BANQUET ROOM was crowded. Among those present were Messrs. Sullivan, Sexton, O'Brien, McCarthy, Biggar, Gray, Healy, O'Connor, and other members of Parliament. Lord Mayor Dawson presided. In his response to the toast of "Ireland a Nation," said that led by Parnell they might believe themselves on the threshold of heralding in the Irish nation. Lord Mayor Dawson then read an address to Parnell. Mr. Parnell, on rising to reply, was cheered. He referred to the formation of the Land League, and said: "Never was there a movement formed to contend against such a system of robbery and fraud, in the carrying out of which there was so much moderation displayed and such absence of crime. There are 30,000 soldiers and 15,000 police in Ireland. The law of habeas corpus has been repeatedly violated, the most significant example being when a thousand Irishmen were imprisoned by BUCKENHAM FORSTER.

If the Liberals wish the Irish to co-operate with them there must be no more coercive emigration. We regard any system of emigration that we have yet had in this country as a murderous blow against the life of our nation, being accompanied by untold sufferings on the part of the victims. Three-fourths of the emigrants from Ireland during the last year or two have been compelled to find homes in miserable garrets in New York, Boston and Montreal. The proceedings of Mr. Tuke's committee stand exposed as an indecent attempt to assist the Government in getting quit of the Irish people. If we are to be emigrated or coerced, we prefer to have the dose administered by the Tories rather than by those wolves in sheep's clothing, the Whigs. The present Irish executive is characterized by greater meanness and incapacity than any of his predecessors. Earl Spencer came to Ireland as a sort of INFERIOR BOTTLE-HOLDER to Forster. We are not surprised that Spencer should do his best to imitate the biggest coercerist who ever came to Ireland, and that he should desire to give full play to the unbridled insults and passions of the foreign garrison in Ireland. Trevelyan's ambition is to prevent everyone from doing what he has a legal right to do. Instances are the imprisonment of Harrington, the seizure of the Kerry Standard and the arrest of its editor, and the suppression of national meetings in the North. Our rulers' want of common honesty permits Harrington to remain in prison for an offence of which the men in Dublin Castle must know he is innocent. All our experience of English dealings in Ireland results in the conclusion that the English always are willing to employ force to the fullest extent against masses of the people. With regard to the question of including Ireland in the EXTENSION OF THE FRANCHISE. our position is a strong and winning one. Whether Ireland is included or not we shall return about eight members at the next election. Although our present progress is slow, we are adding to the impetus which was given to the national cause in the days of the great league. Coercion cannot last for ever; it is certain that it rests with Irishmen to determine at the next general election whether a Liberal or Tory government shall rule England. This is our great goal, if we cannot rule ourselves to cause England to be ruled as we choose. We are determined that this generation shall not pass away until it has bequeathed to those who come after us the best right of national independence and prosperity. The close of Parnell's speech was greeted with great cheering. Mr. Dawson then presented Parnell with a cheque for £38,000 as

A NATIONAL TRIBUTE. CHICAGO, Dec. 11.—The following cablegrams are self-explanatory:—"Dublin, Dec. 11.—Alexander Sullivan, President Irish National Land League, America, Ohio, writes: 'Twelve hundred Nationalists in meeting honoring Parnell, greet America and send thanks for her sympathy.' (Signed), Dawson.

CHICAGO, Dec. 11.—Lord Mayor Dawson, Dublin:—Irish America salutes Ireland; echoes her cheers for Parnell; will never cease struggling with her for liberty until it is achieved. (Signed), Alexander Sullivan.

LONDON, Dec. 11.—The Telegraph, in an article on Irish affairs, avers that Mr. Parnell owes his reputation for greatness to his having been imprisoned for the Irish cause. Commenting upon the attitude of the Irish clergy it remarks that the anathemas of the Pope against clerical interference in political matters have been powerless in Ireland and Italy, though successful in other countries.

The Times says the gift to Mr. Parnell is an expression of the dominant feeling in Ireland. Mr. Parnell, though an utterly ordinary man, is a tactician, cool and unscrupulous. It was through these qualities that he succeeded in undermining the influence of Messrs. Shaw and Butt.

IRISH STATE CONVENTION. MILWAUKEE, Wis., Dec. 13.—At the Irish State Convention to-day resolutions were reported condemning the British Government and approving the action of the Philadelphia Convention in calling for allegiance to Parnell, declaring that Ireland's hope lies in the unity and fraternity of her sons, regardless of creed or sect, and denouncing as infamous the efforts of the British Government to kindle the fire of religious intolerance, manifested in the late attacks on English inspired mobs upon meetings of Irish Nationalists.

The resolutions say it is the duty of Irishmen to promote manufacture in Ireland and encourage the importation of Irish goods into America.

A HOME DRUGGIST TESTIFIES.

Popularity at home is not always the best test of merit, but we point proudly to the fact that no other medicine has won for itself such universal approbation in its own city, state, and country, and among all people, as

Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

The following letter from one of our best-known Massachusetts Druggists should be of interest to every sufferer:—

"Eight years ago I had an attack of Rheumatism. It was so severe that I could not move from the bed, or dress, without pain. I tried several remedies without much if any relief, until I took AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, by the use of two bottles of which I was completely cured. Have sold large quantities of your Sarsaparilla, and it still retains its wonderful popularity. The many notable cures it has effected in this city convince me that it is the best blood medicine ever offered to the public. E. F. HARRIS, River St., Buckland, Mass., May 13, 1882.

SALT RHEUM.

GEORGE ANDREWS, overseer in the Lowell Carpet Corporation, was for over twenty years before his removal to Lowell afflicted with Salt Rheum in its worst form. His skin was actually covered more than half the surface of his body and limbs. He was entirely cured by AYER'S SARSAPARILLA. See certificate in Ayer's Almanac for 1883.

PREPARED BY Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass. Sold by all Druggists, $1, six bottles for $5.

THE PARNELL BANQUET.

The London Dailies in a Rage—One of Them Hazards the Opinion that He is a "Friend of Ireland"—The Thunder on Earl Spencer's Policy.

LONDON, Dec. 12.—The Standard says: Parnell must feel some compunction and shame at having been the most prominent person at a banquet where the Queen was wantonly and gratuitously insulted.

The Telegraph says the Government must take immediate steps to teach Parnell that his defiance will not be further tolerated.

The News believes that Parnell honestly desires to act for Ireland's good, but is willing to resort to anything to win.

The Times says it is evident Earl Spencer's policy has entirely baffled the plans of the Land Leaguers.

THE HARP WITHOUT THE CROWN.

DUBLIN, Dec. 12.—At the banquet to Parnell last night the French, United States and Irish flags, the last with the harp, but without the crown, were grouped over the chairman's seat. Thirty priests were present, most of them being from the dioceses of Archbishop Croke and Bishop Nulty.

WHY "OUR FRUIT" IS GOING TO HOME.

BISMARCK AND THE POPE—A SEMBLER OLD MENORAN.

New York, Dec. 11.—A London telegram says:—"The question and the puzzle to-day is the Crown Prince's journey to Rome. Nobody seems able to explain why it is to be undertaken. The clericals are quite as ignorant on this point as the Liberals. Herr Windthorst, the leader of the Centre, said yesterday, when told of the projected journey, that it was impossible otherwise he should have known something about it. The Moniteur de Rome, closely connected with the Vatican, had a telegram from Berlin only four days ago in which it is said that negotiations with the Vatican have remained so far without any result, and that the Crown Prince's visit was intended for the Vatican primarily, not for the Quirinal, in spite of the attempted denial of the Norddeutsche Allgemeine Zeitung. Had the Crown Prince wished to see the King of Italy alone the latter would doubtless have made a journey to Genoa or to some other point to meet him. The journey to Rome for this object therefore is unnecessary. The Liberals assert that Prince Bismarck has arranged to settle the political and ecclesiastical conflict with Rome for the purpose of obtaining a majority in the Reichstag by a combination with the Conservatives and Centre in order to carry through his scheme for the insurance of workmen against accidents; but this idea is untenable, as Prince Bismarck would scarcely sacrifice a position in which he believes himself right in order to gain a passing victory in the Reichstag. There must be other and greater reasons besides this for the sudden summoning of the Minister of Culture on Saturday to Friedrichshagen. It would seem to point out that Bismarck himself was unprepared. The only plausible assumption is that the Crown Prince's visit is undertaken at the personal wish and will of Kaiser Wilhelm, who desires peace with Rome before he leaves the Empire to his successor. One Berlin paper calls to mind the words addressed by the Crown Prince during his short period of regency on June 10, 1878, to a homeless Pope:—"This visit, doubtless, results from a natural desire on the part of Kaiser Wilhelm to leave the Empire at peace, not only with his powerful neighbors, but, what is more essential, with itself."

BISMARCK AND THE POPE. Bismarck's visit to Rome is a political move. The Pope's visit to Berlin is a political move. The result is a political move.
