

No one spot in all the world is so linked to associations in which so many peoples may feel pride.

But above all, there is a call to every French and British heart from this sacred ground. The causes of strife are long since dead and passed away. But the great memories alone remain. The common memory of a common heroism which should bind, and does and will bind, our two peoples more and more as Canadians. Here now and forever stands the field and the immortal part of all that is most heroic in the two great Canadian races.

This appeal is to all our people. It is to those who have influence and the means to speed the good-will and the patriotic ideal. It is to the clergy of all denominations, the teachers in the schools, the heads of all associations—it is to that great regiment of toilers, the tillers of the field, the men of the mart and mine, so that all our people may have their part in this great patriotic revival.
