USED HATCHET ON CHINAMAN But Celestial Had Strong Rally and Chased Unknown Intruder.

The police are looking for a man with a cut in the back of his neck. They want him for the infliction of a aber of cuts upon Yep Tuck, Chinaman, employed in Charlie Yong's laundry at 209 Elizabeth-st.

The man entered the laundry at two o'clock yesterday afternoon armed with a hatchet. He attacked the celestial, who secured possession of the weapon and despite the fact that he had sustained several severe cuts on the head and neck, drove his assailant out of the premises, inflicting a cut on the back of his neck.

It is alleged that just before the attack, a man went to the site of the new hospital and asked a workman for a crowbar, saying he had a little work to do over at the Chinamen's. He was refused, but borrowed a hatchet from a small boy nearby.

CEMENT'S USES APPEAL TO RAILWAYS MINISTER

Might Even Be Used for Breakfast Food, He Opined, at Opening

Graham indulged his audience with a few humorous remarks; apparently with the hope of giving the scene a more cheerful aspect. Looking about the hall, he said there was every indication that cement could be used for any manufacture, excepting food, and he believed it possible that some enterprising breakfast food man might be able to work it in.

Speaking in a more serious strain, Mr. Graham said that, as the head of a department that used a considerable, amount of it, he could say that Canadian count of the covernment and Anthosas of the best quality and the department had found it pair to use it. Ten years ago the output was 400,000 pounds, and last year it amounted to 4,700,000 pounds.

The spokesmen of the deputation will maintain that under the already heavy expenses to which they are subjected the margin of profit in the business has been greatly reduced, and they will urge that the proposed amendment be dropped, or at least modified, as otherwise they will feel obliged to adopt a general increase in rates.

A CHICARO PASTOR'S WORK.

The pastor for twenty-five years (without a vacation) of a Chicago church, Rev. R. A. John, of St. Paul's Lutheran, has the record of 2500 funerals, 3500 weddings, 4000 christenings and of extinguishing a church debt of $160,000. His co-pastor all these years was his wife. He was the son of a Missouri minister, who endured sixty years of the ministry and whose these sons are all ministers. The building up of a big city church is illustrated by the changes in the affairs of St. Paul's Church. When Rev. Mr. John became pastor twenty-five years ago the Sunday-school had only sixty chil-dren, who were grouped in one di-ision; the membership of the present ision; the membership of the present Sunday-school is 1300, divided into four thoroly organized divisions, which are directed by expert Sunday-school workers. Twenty-five years ago there were no societies in the church, while to-day there are three, with an aggregate membership of over 1200—a woman's society with 535 members, a senior young people's society with 425 members and a junior young people's society with 325 members. In addition to the thoroly organized Sunday-school to the thoroly organized Sunday-school the church has many other lines charitable and missionary work which is sustained by free will offerings from the parish, the most noteworthy of which is an orphanage.

As supplemental to the view of Dr. Lockwood upon the unreliability of birds as weather prophets the writer might recall several instances coming under his own observation. But as they were all similar in the particular or feature of mission description. or feature of mistaken identity as to the speedy forthcoming of the spring season, one instance will suffice. On a bright sunny morning in On a bright sunny morning in February, some years ago, one of the sparrow family, native and to the manner born, to his credit be it said, known to the scientific bird men as the melospiza, was seen and heard in a maple tree in the main street of an Ocean County village. The tree was quite bare of foliage, but the air was balmy—almost warm. in fact. This balmy-almost warm, in fact. This clever and dainty little fellow, whose acquaintance is well worth making when he will consent to become when he will consent to become acquainted with mere man or woman. as he will upon proper and discreet advances being made in the quiet of his home life during the mating season, was leaping about unabashed among the nude limbs of the tree sweetening the air with his cheery and skilful pipe and adding to the sunshine in his delicate but not impressive plumage—at least not impressive plumage—at least not impressive except upon close observation, when the plumage of all real song birds becomes impressive and pleasing, not only to the eye, but to the sense MEETING.

as he will upon proper and discreet advances being made in the quiet of his home life during the mating seabirds becomes impressive and pleasing, not only to the eye, but to the sense of the beautiful in nature. Before nightfall of that misleading day the weather changed. A misty rain came first and then Jack Frost came along, as he sometimes does in the spring. He was on mischief bent and the next morning the trees were "a glare of ice." The little sparrow may or may not have waited until he got cold feet before going south again. It is certain that he disappeared as abruptly as he had appeared, and did not reappear until March was fully half grown.

The bluebird, too, now and then arrives ahead of the spring timetable and goes away again, altho not many years ago the writer saw a pair of these interesting birds—which the English sparrow seems to take especial delight in annoying in rural settlements—in a grove of cedars near Point Pleasant in January.
