REAL BREAKFAST FOOD

There is a village in New England which clings fondly to the customs of the past and has small regard for innovations. Not long ago an old resident died. Not long ago an old resident died. He was a dyspeptic, and ever cautious about his food. Therefore he looked searchingly at the waitress as she stood at the breakfast table the next morning. "I'm—obliged to be very careful of myself," he said, solemnly. "My diet is extremely limited. What sort of breakfast food have you? That is all I take in the morning except dry toast." "We have apple, squash and mince," said the girl, regarding him in kindly and sympathetic fashion. "You can have your choice, or have all three if you like."—Youth's Companion.

THE TIMES NEW REPORTER

HIRAM'S REFLECTIONS.

"I see you fellows don't want no hanz stand on King square," said Mr. Hiram Hombard to the Times' new reporter, this morning. "Well, I don't blame you. I'm fond of dogs myself, an' if you had a hand playin' there it might scare off the dogs from the flower beds next summer. I allus like to set down on a bench there an' watch them dogs. I don't s'pose the's another town in Ameriky treats its dogs as well as you people in St. John. Now, out to the Settlement, a dog's a dog—an' he's a dog's place; an' if my wife saw a dog in the flower garden she'd holler for the shot gun. But down here you hirs men to make flower beds for the dogs to scratch in all summer. Missie is elevatin'—no doubt. I used to lift me up some when I sot the times in the old meetin' house, an' I like to hear a hand—specially a fire an' drum band; but fer somethin' that's real movin' to a man's sperrit gimme four or five dogs in a nice flower bed, like I see on King square many a time last summer. When I read that the city coronet band wanted to put up a band stand on King square, with electric lights in all colors over the fountain, I jist said to the old woman she'd be a row about that. Of course if the dogs didn't mind the noise I s'pose the thing wouldn't be so bad, but when it comes to dogs or music the music don't come. Why don't they build a dog-house on the square? Hev' whut?"
