

American Watch Case Co.

An enterprise that adds materially to Toronto's financial strength is that of the American Watch Case Co., which has been in business for a long time. The management of this company is in the hands of gentlemen whose names are in the highest esteem of the community. The company is an assurance of honesty and fair dealing. This is the largest watch case factory in the empire.

The gentlemen of this concern are well known in the financial and commercial world of Toronto, and are most reliable and trustworthy, and their business ability and strict integrity guaranteed for this enterprise a success from its very inception.

To the working masses of this city this institution should appeal most strongly and labor and its friends will serve their interests to the best advantage by patronizing this company in its line of business. We earnestly join with citizens of all classes in wishing this institution a continued prosperity and success.

The Home Savings and Loan Company, Limited

Special mention should be made in this issue of the Home Savings and Loan Company whose attitude towards organized labor has never been antagonistic or uncertain, and which is entitled to the hearty support and encouragement of the thousands of union men in our city. This company has always cooperated cheerfully to further the conservative labor movement, and has never failed to set the seal of its approval upon the broad, underlying principle of unionism. Owing to the broad-minded and public-spirited manner of extending friendship to all, this company has built up a large and substantial patronage and is exceedingly popular among the workmen of this section.

The policy of this deserving enterprise is strictly in accordance with the very principles of unionism, which are so unanimously and potently upheld. We are pleased to note that the management is in the hands of fair-minded citizens, who can always be depended upon as reasonable in their dealings both with labor and the public. The co-operation of the union men of Toronto in favor of this company, will not be misplaced.

They are located at 78 Church street and are offering to the public 3 1/2 per cent. interest on money deposited.

They have been in business as a Savings Bank and Loan Co. since 1854 and are soon to become the "Home Bank of Canada."

Canadian Correspondence College

One of the leading educational institutions of Toronto is the Canadian Correspondence College, located at 40-46 King street west. This institution is doing a grade of work which should commend it to all who desire self-improvement and to all friends of education. It is well known that six-sevenths of the boys who are in school at twelve years of age leave before they are fourteen. The result is that only a small percentage of our young men are properly equipped by mental training and special education for their life work. This college is intended to help those who are already employed during the day, but wish to spend their evenings in self-improvement. All their work is conducted by mail.

We heartily recommend this college to our members as one that can be depended upon to act justly toward the members of all labor organizations. We are glad to place this commendable college foremost in the list of reliable institutions. They have by their fair dealing and steady business qualities enjoyed a steadily increasing business, which is due in a great measure to the excellent quality of their teaching, for it is a well known fact that they are doing good work. It is a purely Canadian college, and gives thorough and practical courses by mail in a wide range of subjects. Our members will find it to their advantage to investigate the work of this institution, and take the course which they find suitable to their needs.

Ontario Bank.

There can be no question but that the cause of labor has been more or less retarded because of a lack of economy on the part of the members themselves. Several strikes which were unavoidable and manifestly justifiable, were defeated in their object because the strikers were unable for lack of funds to hold out long enough to be successful.

Every wage earner should learn to see the importance of depositing on each pay day for future use a certain amount of his earnings.

The time to start is when, as at present, wages are high and employment plentiful. An account once started forms a habit of thrift and economy, which are a proof against future loss of employment or periods of financial depression. We will do well to place money where it will be absolutely safe and at the same time draw a rate of interest consistent with sound business principles. There are several institutions which are safe and reliable in every respect; but upon careful investigation we find that one of the very best in the city is the Ontario Bank, located at 31-33 Scott street, whose relations with workingmen have been very cordial and satisfactory.

The officers have always shown a most friendly attitude toward labor, and the union men of Toronto will make no mistake in extending to the Ontario Bank their hearty co-operation.

The Toronto Silver Plate Co.

The truest friend of organized labor is one who pays one hundred cents for a dollar's worth of labor and who furthermore gives to his customer an honest one hundred cents' worth of merchandise for one dollar of coin of the realm.

This is the policy that has been doggedly pursued by the Toronto Silver Plate Company, Limited, of Toronto, and nowhere has progressive expansion in this city been better or more forcibly exemplified than at this extensive establishment at 570 King street.

It is strictly in accordance with the broad underlying principles of unionism fostered and encouraged by the considerable home industry and enterprises and it is to the interest of the community to aid in establishing an establishment which caters to the class of customers that demands the highest grade of reliable and dependable goods.

The management of the Toronto Silver Plate Company is broad-minded and public-spirited. The officers include J. M.

The London Guarantee and Accident Company.

Prominent among the large firms of Toronto must be mentioned that of The London Guarantee and Accident Co. This company deserves the most honorable mention on account of its broad-minded policy and courteous consideration of all matters of policy.

This firm has gained a host of friends among all the classes and the volume of their business is constantly increasing, through the efforts of the agents. Their head office for Canada is situated in the Canada Life Building. Their attitude towards organized labor has always been just and reasonable, and no effort should be spared by our readers to give them a full share of patronage. We have no hesitancy in placing this reliable concern before the public and the citizens of Toronto, who are to be depended upon as substantial and consistent friends of the workmen.

American Bell Engine and Thresher Co., Limited

Toronto has reason to be proud of its leading manufacturing establishments. Prominent among these is the American Bell Engine & Thresher Co., Limited. This firm has by fair and honorable business methods, built up a large business, and is a credit to the city. Its record upon all matters pertaining both to labor and the public is of the highest.

The officials are citizens well known for their fair and friendly attitude toward labor. The employees receive good compensation for their work, and are treated with justice and consideration. All our citizens should be deeply interested in advancing the welfare of our leading enterprises, which are worthy of support and encouragement. The prosperity of a city as a whole means the prosperity of the individual firms and corporations worthy of such support, and the workmen of Toronto will make no mistake in extending to this company their hearty co-operation.

The Equitable Life.

A striking example of the power and good derived from the combination of labor and capital is shown by the remarkable progress of the Equitable. Organized over forty-four years ago, this company is one of the world's greatest financial institutions. In this society the toiler and the capitalist are on an equal footing. The wage-earner obtains his insurance at exactly the same cost as the capitalist, and the profits are distributed in exact equity. As a result, the Equitable is to-day the strongest life company in the world, its surplus alone exceeding seventy-five million dollars. The attitude of the society towards labor has always been just and reasonable, and it is well known to its protecting fold that most desirable insurer, the wage-earner.

We have no hesitancy in placing this concern before our readers. It may be depended upon as a substantial help and considerable friend of the working man.

Mr. E. J. Dennen, Provincial Manager, whose office is at 98 Yonge street, informs us that the company has excellent openings for men of character and energy.

The New Carleton

In our city there are a number of concerns which should receive the hearty support and endorsement of all our citizens. Business men can show no greater tribute to the cause of labor than by giving the co-operation to such institutions as have shown a friendly attitude toward the labor movement. We are pleased to note that The New Carleton, located at the corner of the Yonge and Richmond streets, have always shown a friendly attitude toward labor, and the union men of Toronto will make no mistake in extending to this institution their hearty co-operation in every possible way.

The proprietors are among the most prominent, broad-minded and public-spirited citizens of Toronto, and it is a pleasure to know that a firm of this kind takes such a kindly interest in labor.

This hotel is worthy of being classed foremost among the friends of labor. This is an important concern and we take pleasure in giving them honorable mention.

Christie Brown & Co., Limited.

Quite apart from the consideration of labor, the just treatment of employees is becoming more and more to be regarded as a good business investment. Fair wages, reasonable hours, an occasional holiday, and provisions for their health and comfort, are demands as surely as expert management and improved machinery. It is the order to this progressive age, the reputation of a firm for just dealing is a far better advertisement than printed ink.

Among the several Toronto factories visited by a representative of The Toller, where the spirit prevails, we are pleased to mention the Christie Brown & Co.'s plant, at 15-45 Duke street. As the result of the good understanding that exists at this establishment, no more effective service can be found than here. It is a revelation to pay a visit to this immense institution devoted to the making of crackers, and cake specialties; to note the extreme cleanliness everywhere; the perfect system of each department, and the many conveniences for the benefit of the workers of the company that have been installed. There is less profit in each box or carton it is true, for the company has to compete with other factories in the Dominion where money is saved in the expense of either the quality of the goods or the conditions under which they are made, but in time merit wins as is witnessed by the growing business of this firm, which extends to all parts of the Dominion. Their products are a standard of excellence; their plant is model order after which many other enterprises might pattern with profit.

We wish them every success in the extension of their business.

The Patterson Candy Co.

One of the most prominent concerns of Toronto which seems to give it its metropolitan character, is that of The Patterson Candy Co., which is preeminent one of the leading establishments of the city. In the transaction of its business, the firm gives employment both directly and indirectly, to a number of people. We are pleased to note that The Patterson Candy Co., located at 218

Queen street west, and 98 Yonge street, is held in the highest esteem by their employees. It is a pleasure to know that this firm takes such a kind and considerate interest in its employees, to whom it accorded the fairest and most courteous treatment. The firm members have proven themselves liberal, broad-minded and public-spirited citizens, who believe firmly in life and its principles, and they have always co-operated cheerfully in furthering the cause of labor and the labor movement. This establishment is of great material benefit to the city, whose population is so largely made up of workingmen and who are most affected by the condition of business. We take pleasure in placing the name of The Patterson Candy Co. among the substantial friends of conservative organized labor.

This firm are extensive manufacturers of "Patterson's Candy."

The Consumers Gas Company.

The lighting problem is especially important to the workmen of this city who form so large a percentage of the city's population. There is no establishment which involves greater investment of capital and the employment of a large force of workmen than is required to operate so extensive a company as the Consumers Gas Company.

To successfully operate a company of this kind it requires not only capital, but also careful management. That the Consumers Gas Company is so carefully and properly managed is shown by the splendid service which it renders the city.

The officers of the company are: Laratt W. Smith, D.C.L., R.C. Pres.; C. R. Cook, Vice-Pres.; W. H. Pearson, General Manager and Secretary. These gentlemen are capable men, thoroughly experienced. They have proven themselves to be broad-minded and public-spirited citizens, and have always shown an interest in our project to advance the business interests of the city. The work of this great company should be applauded and encouraged by the citizens of the city, and we feel safe in predicting that the Consumers Gas Company will continue to increase in popularity and prosperity so long as it is in the hands of the present able and efficient managers. We gladly mention the name of the Consumers Gas Company among the prominent concerns which are a credit to the community and a factor in developing its interests. Its offices are located at 17-19 Toronto street.

Minerva Mfg. Co., Limited.

One of the reliable concerns of Toronto is the Minerva Mfg. Co. This concern is worthy of commendation, not only because of the excellent quality of its output, but also on account of the manifestly fair and honorable manner of dealing with the public. This successful enterprise is well and favorably known throughout the entire province and since the date of its inception the business has constantly increased. It is to-day holds a position of prominence in this important line of work. The management is broad-minded and public-spirited, and a thoroughly reliable and substantial business is carried on. The prestige and commercial value of Toronto is greatly increased by the existence of this meritorious enterprise, which adds materially to the sum total of the city's happiness and prosperity.

The Minerva Mfg. Co. are employers of labor and our working men should give them their hearty support and encouragement and aid in every possible way to make the firm a greater and more splendid success.

Ogilvie Flour Mills Co., Limited.

Concerns which win to a large extent the leadership in their kind of business and the esteem and confidence of the public, do so not by mere accident, but by honest effort to be fair and reasonable both with labor and the public. Concerns which deviate from this principle are certain to fall of their own weight. On the other hand, firms which have invested in a large force of men who are treated with fairness and consideration are entitled to the confidence and encouragement of all who have the best interests of labor and the city at heart. This point is well exemplified in the Ogilvie Flour Mills Co., Limited, Toronto office located at Confederation Building. They have always exhibited a most friendly and considerate attitude toward labor and the cause of labor, and have made a host of friends among our people. The business is conducted along strictly modern lines, broad, liberal methods ensuring absolute satisfaction in every transaction. They make a specialty of high grade flour.

Head office Montreal. Mills at Ontario and Winnipeg. Manufacturers of Ogilvie's Celebrated Hungarian and Glencoe brands of flour. Ogilvie's Roller Oats and Ogilvie's Royal Breakfast Food.

Chapman Double Ball Bearing Company, Limited.

Among the many enterprises of Toronto there is none more worthy of honorable mention nor of liberal support than that of The Chapman Double Ball Bearing Co. This company has, since the date of its inception, adhered strictly to the principles of fairness and justice and has a most excellent and enviable standing with the public at large. Their views are of the most liberal and valuable kind, and their judgment is considered to be sound and conservative and their attitude toward our cause is all that we can ask, and thoroughly satisfactory. This firm is one that Toronto can well be proud of and we feel that our issue would fall short of our expectations did we fail to mention this commendable concern. The business prosecuted by this company is very extensive and adds materially to the progress and prosperity of our city as a whole.

The Chapman Double Ball Bearing Co. power saws has no equal. It was demonstrated in the Machinery Hall at the Dominion Exhibition, where the whole of the line shafting was equipped, that it took but one-fifth of the power to drive the shafting that it did with the plain journals, and will be a great boon to manufacturers and users of power. The company is equipping a factory on Pearl street, where the new machinery and bearings will be on the market, and from the demand already in evidence, this should develop into a very large industry.

The HONEYMOON COOK

By HARRIET G. CANFIELD

Copyright, 1903, by T. C. McClure

They had been married two years, "long enough," Prue suddenly declared, "to dispense with all honeymoon demonstrations."

Tom Dawson put down his evening paper and stared at the pretty little partner of his joys and sorrows. "I'm afraid I don't understand, dear," he said.

"Why, it's very simple. If you know that I care for you—and I am certain that you care for me—all signs of affection are quite superfluous; they may be dropped."

"Oh!" Tom said dubiously. "Well, what shall I drop first? There was a twinkle in his eyes, and Prue saw it. "To be serious," she pleaded, "to begin with, you must not kiss me when you come home to dinner—and other times. You must drop—"

"Drop you a courtesy instead," he interrupted her laughingly.

"Don't be ridiculous, Tom! I know very well that there are many useless customs that should be abandoned, many things that should be dropped."

"Yes," he said, smiling whimsically. "Hannah thinks so, I know. She dropped my meerschaum this morning. We must take lessons of that girl, Prue, or drop her. On the whole, I think we'd better drop her."

"It will not be necessary," she said, with dignity. "Hannah gave notice this morning. I shall have to find some one else within a week."

"I'm sorry—sorry, I mean, for the family she'll drop down on next. Hannah's no feather weight, you know. Speaking of dropping—"

"I am not speaking of it now. It is quite useless while you are in such a mood," she said indignantly, rising from her chair.

Before she could leave the room Tom was at her side. "Forgive me, dear," he said. "I didn't know you were to such sober earnest." He stopped to kiss the pink cheek next to him, but Prue lifted a protesting hand. "Don't, Tom," she said. "You forget; it isn't necessary."

"No, it isn't necessary"—the words came sobriety enough now—"only sweet and natural."

And the next day, when the time came to go to bed, Prue had no occasion to complain of his "honeymoon demonstrations."

"Tom is very sensible this morning," she said to herself, but she sighed as she laid it and went about all day with a wistful look in her blue eyes. Tom was "sensible" in the evening also, the next morning he was so very sensible that Prue cried a little, but perhaps it was for joy. Even "sensible" people do that.

That afternoon Matilda made her appearance. Hannah came into the sitting room to announce her arrival. Matilda Stebbins was here, Prue said, "after my place. Will I show her in, ma'am? She and me used to work together once, and she's a dreadful good cook."

"Yes, I will see her," Prue said. And in a moment a tall, lean, freckle faced girl was standing in the doorway. Prue asked pleasantly, and the girl said into a chair, still smiling.

"I hope you'll give me a try," she said. "I'd like first rate to cook for you and him."

It was Prue's turn to smile. "Have you had much experience?" she asked. "Heaps of it, ma'am, but never long to plan a dinner."

"That seems strange," Prue exclaimed.

"Well, you see, ma'am, the honeymoons don't usually stretch out over and above six months."

The honeymoons? "I don't cook and do for none but new married folks. Hannah told me about you and him when she first came here two months ago. She said as how she knew you was just married."

Prue blushed. "How did Hannah know it?" she asked.

"Easy enough, ma'am. It's like measles and whooping cough. She could tell by the symptoms. I'd rather live where there's love-making going on continually than read the best novel ever made up."

This was interesting, but very embarrassing to Mrs. Thomas Dawson. Two days ago she would have laughed heartily at Matilda's sayings and have found much enjoyment in repeating them to Tom. But present conditions made the girl's remarks seem almost personal, yet she felt tempted to engage her.

"Matilda," said she, "did Hannah tell you the wages she received and the work she was expected to do?"

"Yes, ma'am, she did, and I don't think she'll better herself none going to work in a factory."

"Very well. I will give you a trial. When can you come?"

"I can stay now, ma'am, and get dinner if you'll let me go home for my clothes when the work's up. Hannah wants to leave as soon as she can anyway."

And so it happened that the honeymoon cook held sway in the Dawson kitchen when the owner of the house came home that evening.

"You will be glad to hear that I've engaged a new girl," Prue said to him in the distant polite tone that she had recently adopted in speaking to her husband.

"Very glad," he answered, "if she is an improvement on Hannah."

The dinner was excellent, and Matilda was very attentive in her service at table, beaming on them as though she would say, "Bless you, my children." Late in the evening, when they were apparently much absorbed in reading, they heard a strange sound, half cough, half sneeze, in the hall. Prue looked up from the book. "What was that?" she said. Tom was on his way to the door when Matilda entered the room. "It was me, ma'am," she said. "I never walk in on new married folks without givin' 'em warnin' I'm a-comin'—not at first. Of course they get used to me after awhile and go right on lovin' if I do see 'em. Nothin' suits me better'n that!"

Prue's face was scarlet. She dared not look at Tom. Oh, why had she engaged the difference of such a silly, sentimental creature?

"If you please, ma'am," Matilda continued, "I'm goin' home now to get my clothes, and I'll say good night to you and him."

"Thought we were new married folks, did she?" Tom said grimly. "I can't imagine why. She's a good cook," he added, "and I hope we can keep her."

"We can," Prue said to herself. "If we will meet her peculiar requirements. But I'll not be driven into any foolishly unnecessary display of affection."

For three days the Dawsons enjoyed the results of Matilda's culinary efforts, but a heavy heart will affect the best of appetites somewhat, and on the fourth day Matilda complained that they "didn't seem to relish their victuals" and she "guessed she'd better be goin'."

"Oh, no," Prue cried. "No one could suit us better than you do."

"I'm glad of that, ma'am; but there's another reason," and she hung her head.

Prue was painfully embarrassed, for she could guess the other reason. "I hope you will stay," she stammered.

"I'll think it over till tomorrow, ma'am, but I feel as if Hannah hadn't been fair with me, leadin' me to expect things was different between you and him from what they really be."

Tom came home later than usual that night. Prue was in the hall giving some instructions to Matilda when he opened the door. His eyes looked tired and sad, she thought. She hesitated a moment—only a moment—for Matilda was present, and now was her opportunity to redeem herself in the girl's eyes, when she ran to meet her husband and held up her face to be kissed. The tired look faded from his eyes as if by magic, and he put both arms around her and held her close. "Has my little wife come to her senses?" he asked.

"Hush!" she answered. "I still think it's unnecessary, but Matilda likes it. She refuses to stay unless we are 'affectionate like.' And she laughed hysterically."

"Oh," Tom said. That was all, but there was a world of disappointment in the exclamation. Then he looked beyond his wife at Matilda, who stood beaming at him, her hands clasped in ecstasy. "Well, she'll stay now," he said bitterly. "I congratulate you."

Yes; Matilda had decided to remain. She came to the sitting room door after dinner to announce her decision.

After she had gone Prue left her seat and moved restlessly about the room. Then she sighed so deeply that Tom looked up from his paper. "Head-ache?" he asked.

"No," she said. Her lips trembled, and she buried her face in her hands and sobbed out, "It's just heart ache, Tom."

"Heart ache?" he said gently. "I thought I had a monopoly of that."

Prue came close to his chair and leaned against an arm of it. "Tom," she cried, "remember—Tom, dear, will you forgive me and—?" Her voice sank to a whisper—"kiss me?"

He caught her hands in his and drew her down beside him. "To please Matilda?" he asked.

"Because if it is to please that girl I'll be hanged if I— But something prevented further speech just then."

When the Dawsons celebrated their wedding it was with the assistance of their honeymoon cook.

An Unfamiliar Dialect.

An American woman who was lately in London for the first time is convinced that whatever the language may be which the cockneys speak it is not English. One of her experiences is related by the Washington Post.

"The woman wished to see the city all by herself. Somebody told her that she went to the terminus of some bus lines, it did not matter which, and waited a little she would hear the conductor call out the places on the route and then choose that which she wished to visit."

She found a place where buses were arriving and departing and waited. She heard many curious names, but failed to understand much that the bus men said. Every now and then the man on the step of a bus would call out, "Moblitch, Moblitch," and she wondered what part of London "Moblitch" might be. She had never heard of it before, and she had been studying London for six months. At last she ventured to address a conductor who looked approachable.

"Will you kindly tell me," she said, "where one takes the bus for the Marble arch?"

The man looked at her pityingly. Her American accent was thick upon her, and he perceived also that she must be deaf. He heard toward her and drew a long breath. Then he belatedly:

"This is your bus, ma'am," he began to shout. "Moblitch, Moblitch."

The visitor had let seven "Moblitch" buses go because she never once guessed that that is the way Marble arch is pronounced in London.

LABOR AND POLITICS.

John Martin, director of the Harlem People's Institute, just returned from a visit to Germany, gives the following account of the Social Democratic party in that country. In the recent election this party became the strongest party in Germany, electing eighty-one members to the Reichstag. Mr. Martin says: "The Social Democratic Party is the best organized party in Germany. It runs a political machine as strong as Quay's in Pennsylvania, but it has no bosses. Its leaders are not out for graft. On the contrary, the leaders make financial sacrifice for the sake of the party. They could make six times as much money if they worked for the opposition parties."

"About 2,000,000 of the party voters are Socialists, and another million are social reformers, who support the immediate demands of the party. The two million believe earnestly that the nation should own in common the land, the railways, the mines, the factories and workshops."

"But they all unite in forming a political party. They are not a crowd of wild-eyed dreamers. They believe in step-by-step progress. Von Vollenmar, the Social German leader, said to me, 'We are all opportunists now. The old revolutionary phrases are sometimes used, but they mean nothing.'

"The aim of the party is to establish a republic. It takes the Kaiser and his military. This wonderful party keeps up its educational fight every day in the year, and is bound to go on growing."

ARE YOU A DOUBTER.

Tom was what we commonly call a bull-headed Englishman, and Bob had been trying to make him believe that we are entering upon a new era when men will love their neighbors as themselves. Tom could not hear it any longer, and said, "Now look here, Bob, all this talk about men acting as brothers in business is all rot. I tell you they will never do it, no never! There always has been the strong crushing the weak, the greedy grabbing from the generous, and there always will be." "That's all right, Tom," said Bob, "but you forget that humanity is great on change. Why the seed of the intolerance of the Protestant has grown into such a beautiful tree of tolerance to-day that wherever there is a high and responsible position we give it to a Roman Catholic just to show there is no ill-feeling. And this seed of intolerance which we worship in the form of a millionaire will produce a beautiful tree of brotherhood in our industrial life. You know, Tom, this man that God made is a funny fellow. You can't tell what he will do next, so hope and work for a better day, and that will be one step towards the bringing in of the new era. Goodbye, Tom, I must go." "Goodbye, Bob, and I will think it over, but I doubt very much that men will ever be tolerant and unselfish in business."

The art of government is to make two-thirds of a nation pay all it possibly can for the benefit of the other third—Voltaire.
