BOSTON, Nov. 2—As a result of a visit to T wharf Thursday, where he was given a great reception by the fishermen, Sir Thomas Lipton will offer a handsome prize for a race between fishing vessels, in Massachusetts bay.

The offer resulted from a short conversation with Thomas F. McManus, the designer of fast fishing schooners, while reliding up the north side of T wharf in an automobile.

Sir Thomas had expressed his pleasies of the latest model, of which an unusual number were at the wharf.

"That is what I call a wholesome type of boat," he said.

"Why not race with a boat like that," suggested one of his escort. "Give them wind enough and they will put up a great race."

Through the medium of the "Al" Kaufman—"Sam" Berger battle which Kaufman won, sporting men believe that a possible opponent for James Jeffries, the champion heavyweight, may be obtained. The winner of the fight will be matched against "Philoda". fight will be matched against "Philadel-phia Jack" O'Brien, and the victor of the latter match in turn will be the weight crown.

Although San Francisco boxing authorities have always looked upon Berger and Kaufman as possible pugilistic champions, local sportsmen say "It is to laugh." So far as their aspirations are concerned Berger and Kaufman are developments of the amateur prize ience, for Kaufman came into the Olympic Club, in San Francisco, when Olympic Club, in San Francisco, when Clympic Club, in San Francisco, when Cly teur boxing career. At the time Berger required the services of a big, in training, and so he engaged Kaufman for the part.

with a greater knowledge of ring tactics than Kaufman, Berger made a punching bag of his opponent. Those beatings did not discourage Kaufman, Georgia from St. Id. who had developed a knockout blow which he used with such telling effect which he used with such telling effect in competitions that he usually put his opponents to sleep in amateur tournaments. When the fame of Kaufman's knockout blow began to spread Berger sought a new sparring partner.

The Olympic Club tried hard to match the pair, but Berger dodged the issue by saying that he and Kaufman were such good friends that he would never fight him while there were other heavyweights in sight. Berger then never fight him while there were other heavyweights in sight. Berger then sought a match with "Philadelphia Jack" O'Brien, but clever manipulating by "Billy" Delaney, who had taken Kaufman in charge, resulted in Kaufman getting the preference. O'Brien won through a knockout blow after seventeen rounds of hard fighting. In spite of his defeat, Kaufman made many friends.
