

in its native purity and health, thus teaching man that his salvation lies wholly within himself.

Emanuelism is a subtle handmaid of Christian Science, even though it be at pains to deny it, and, like Christian Science, because it professes bodily cures, appeals to those who are more ready, always, to walk by sight than faith, by natural feeling rather than the quickening of the Spirit.

A sign of the times is Emanuelism—a sign that the Devil is at work, as foretold, not with hoofs and horns, but as an angel of light; a sign that the time of the end is at hand when the air will be filled with “new” thought, and deeds shall be done that shall lead away and deceive the “many.”

It has been foretold that, preceding the second advent of Christ, there should arise a peculiar and special class distinctively called “rich men”; that these would accumulate wealth in their hands to such a degree that the great laboring class would rise in bitterness against them.

The sign is here!

Where once a millionaire was an object of curiosity by reason of his exception, now millionaires may be counted by the thousands in this country, and the multi-millionaire is a common fact. So immensely has wealth been gathered into the hands of the comparatively few, that the lands and resources of the nation
