

THOUGHTS BY THE WAY

One of the Beauty Spots of Picturesque Prince Edward.

Written for The Ontario by "Wayfarer."

Some may be inclined to believe that all parts of the world that come under the awakening influence of June, are what may be termed picturesque, and that we, who have been life-long residents of our fair county, esteem too highly the picturesque of its scenery. But we believe that a fair comparison of the natural beauties of our county with those of many other parts of the province will generally result to the advantage of Prince Edward, "the garden of Ontario."

A motor drive from Wellington along the shore of Lake Ontario to Huysk's Point reveals a harmonious picture to the admirer of the beautiful and artistic. On the left is the lake, its expanse of greenish-blue water glittering in the clear sunlight, as it stretches far beyond the eye's utmost ken. Its waves, breaking foam-crested over the smooth rocks of the shore, make a musical murmur; while on the right, commodious farm-houses, surrounded by well-cultivated fields, attest to the thrift of the people.

On and on we follow the road, which in places keeps closely to the shore, allowing the enjoyment of the beautiful grandeur of this vast expanse of water and the music of the waves dashing rhythmically on the rocks. In other places the road curves to the right, leaving space for farm-houses to be erected near the bank. When our destination is finally reached, a scene of beauty bursts upon our sight—the wooded Point, the clear, rippling waters of the lake, and across the water, a short distance to the right, the Sandbanks, shimmering white in the dazzling sunlight. At a little distance across the water to the left, lies an island, verdant and picturesque in its green, wooded surface, but seeming lonely and secluded in contrast to the inhabited shore.

But the green foliage of the forest seems beckoning to us today, and we enter the cool, green depths, where giant trees of the forest primeval still stand as wary sentinels "to guard the enchanted ground."

In the wood we find groups of people, young and old, who, with basket-laden autos and buglies, have arrived to spend the afternoon, picnicking in this picturesque spot. Flowers, white, pink and blue, lend bright patches of color to the verdant of the forest. These, with the combine, which, growing brightly between strata of rock along the shore, and glowing resplendent in red and yellow, proves an irresistible attraction to not only the boy of the party, but to each of us.

But a visit to the Point, we are told, would be incomplete without a view of the Devil's Den. Making our way through the wood, the boy leading the way, we, after a short walk, reach the shore and look down a high, steep gorge with walls of rocky strata and floor of smoothest rock. The boy, venturing too near the edge of the canyon, is held by a restraining hand lest he miss his footing and fall from that dizzy height. As we looked down into the chasm, we wondered through how many years the elements had been in the formation of this sheltered cove. Of his Salanic Majesty, however, we caught not a glimpse; but as we turned away we could only hope that he might remain always in his den, and refrain from running at large through the world, "seeking whom he might devour."

Stepping from the high ground by a natural stairway, we reached the smooth rocks of the shore, washed perfectly clean by the action of the waves. Here we wandered, feasting our eyes on the beauties of the lake and its tree-clad shore. Down the shore a group of white gulls are grouped on the rocks, apparently motionless; but in an unexpected moment they take wing and rise above the waves. And as we gazed on the wide expanse of water, we were reminded of the vastness of the created world and of its beauty and its mystery. How insignificant seems our little life, when viewing the expanse of sea, and thinking of its power! And behind the vastness and the power and the beauty and the mystery of the great expanse of water, we recognize the illimitable power of God. "His steps are in the sea."

But the sun's slanting rays in the western horizon remind us that it is time for our homeward journey, so reluctantly retracing our steps to the waiting automobile, and plucking the wild flowers on our way, we

There is a pleasure in the pathless woods,
There is a rapture on the lonely shore;
There is society where none intrudes
By the deep sea, and music in its roar—
I love not man the less, but Nature more.
From these, our interviews, in which I steal
From all I may be, or have been before,
To mingle with the Universe and feel
What I can ne'er express, yet cannot not all conceal."—Byron

MELVILLE

Now by every meadowside the butternuts blow;
(O June, you are spendthrift of your gold!)
Green are the uplands where the little lambs go;
Green and glad, the forests that are old.
Once again the summer weaves on her magic loom.
Cloth of clover, fairy web of wheat—
Only Mary's alabaster box of perfume
Ever made the passing wind more sweet.

WONDERFUL GROWTH IN SIDNEY

Mr. J. L. Thrasher Shows Wheat, Barley and Hay Well Developed—How he is Increasing Production.

Mr. J. L. Thrasher of the 3rd concession of Sidney brought into The Ontario office this afternoon some fine stalks of wheat, barley and timothy hay to show what a wonderful growth there is this season. The three exhibits would demonstrate that Sidney has very fertile land. The wheat stalk and head measured no less than 5 ft 6 inches, the barley 4 ft 6 inches, and the hay 4 ft. Such growth is almost a phenomenon.

"Today's rain will quicken up everything," said Mr. Thrasher. "If nothing happens the harvest should be a great one. Mr. Thrasher is one farmer who believes in greater production. This year he has 160 acres under cultivation, 80 of hay and 80 of oats, barley, wheat and hood crops. He is exceedingly fortunate, having 21 acres of fall wheat of which there is very little in Hastings or Prince Edward. The barley crop covers 30 acres. There is very little idle land on Mr. Thrasher's farm this year, yet he and his son Roy with the occasional help of a relative have been managing the farm. Besides they have 16 milch cows to look after."
