"The Mystery of Agatha Webb"

By KATHARINE GREEN

Her eyes, which were all she had remaining to plead with, took on a peculiar look of quiet satisfaction and power. Seeing it, he let his hand fall and for the first time began to regard her with anything but a lover's eyes.

"I was the only person in sight at that time," she continued. "You have nothing to fear from the world at large."

"Fear?"
The word made its own echo. She had no need to emphasize it even by a smile. But she watched him as it sunk into his consciousness with an interest which took all his strength to sustain. Suddenly her hand and expression changed. The few remains of sweetness in her face vanished, and even the allurement which often lasts when the sweetness is gone disappeared in the energy which now took possession of her whole threatening and indefinable personality.

"Marry me," she cried, "or I will proclaim you to be the murderer of Agatha Webb!"
She had seen the death of love in his eyes.

CHAPTER VIII
THE HOLLOW TREE
Frederick Sutherland was a man of finer mental balance than he himself perhaps had ever realized. After the first few moments of stupefaction following the astounding alternative which had been given him he broke out with the last sentence she probably expected to hear.

"What do you hope from a marriage with me that to attain your wishes you thus sacrifice every womanly instinct?" She met him on his own ground.

"What do I hope?" She actually glowed with the force of her secret desire. "Can you ask a poor girl like me, born in a tenement house, but with tastes and ambitions such as are usually only given to those who can gratify them? I want to be the rich Mrs. Sutherland's daughter, acknowledged or unacknowledged the wife of one who can enter any house in Boston as an equal."

With a quick flush, an increase of self-assertion, she had probably not anticipated, he faced her with a desperate resolution that showed how handsome he could be if his soul once got control of his body.

"Woman," he cried, "they were right. You are little less than a devil!"
Did she regard it as a compliment? Her smile would seem to say so.

"A devil that understands men," she answered with that slow dip of her dimples that made her smile so dangerous. "You will not hesitate long over this matter a week perhaps."

"I shall not hesitate at all. Seeing you as you are makes my course easy. You will never share any burden with me as my wife."

"It is a pity," she whispered. "It would have saved you such unnecessary struggle. But a week is not long to wait. I am certain of you then. This day week at 12 o'clock, Frederick!"

He seized her by the arm and, lost to everything but his rage, shook her with a desperate hand.

"Do you mean it?" he cried, a sudden horror showing itself in his face, not "I mean it so much," she assured him, "that before I came home just now I paid a visit to the copse over the way. A certain hollow tree where from me while any hope remains of your doing your duty by me in the way I have suggested."

And still he did not move.
"Frederick!"
Was it her voice that was thus murmuring his name? For the tiger snarl one moment and cool the next?

Or so he thought. But when, after an interval of nameless recoil, he rose and attempted to stagger from the place, he discovered that she had been detained in the hall by two or three men who had just come in by the front door.

"Is this Miss Page?" they were asking.
"Yes, I am Miss Page—Amabel Page," she replied, with suave politeness. "If you have any business with me, settle it quickly, for I am about to leave to-night."

"That is what we wish to prevent," declared a tall, thin young man who seemed to take the lead. "Until the ladies have been held over the remains of Mrs. Webb, Coroner Talbot wishes you to regard yourself as a possible witness."

"Me?" she cried, with an admirable gesture of surprise and a wide opening of her brown eyes, that made her look like an astonished child. "What have I got to do with it?"

"You pointed out a certain spot of blood on the grass, and—well, the coroner's orders have to be obeyed, Miss. You cannot leave the town without running the risk of arrest."

"Then I will stay in it," she smiled. "I have no liking for arrests, and the guilt of her eye rested for a moment on Frederick Sutherland," she continued, "that gentleman appeared at the dining room door, 'I shall have to impose upon your hospitality for a few days longer. These men here inform me that my innocent interest in pointing out to you that spot of blood on the grass, had awakened some curiosity and that I am wanted as a witness by the coroner.'"

Mr. Sutherland with a quick stride lessened the distance between himself and these unwelcome intruders. "The coroner's right," he murmured. "But," he said, but the look he gave his son was not soon forgotten by the spectators.

CHAPTER IX
SIX LITTLE GRAVES
There was but one topic discussed in the countryside that day, and that was the life and character of Agatha Webb.

Her history had not been a happy one. She and Philemon had come from Portchester some 20 or more years before their native town. They had left behind them six small graves in Portchester churchyard, but though evidences of their affliction were always to be seen in the countenances of either they had entered with so much purpose into the life of their adopted town that day from Portchester green to the shipyards in Sutherlandland.

In Deacon Brainerd's cottage the discussion was concerning Agatha's lack of vanity, a virtue not very common at that time among the women of this busy seaport.

"For woman so handsome," the good deacon was saying, "and I think I can safely call her the finest featured woman who ever trod these streets, she showed as little interest in dress as any one I ever saw. Calico at home and calico at church, yet she looked as much of a lady in her dark sprigged gowns as Mrs. Webster in her silks or Mrs. Parsons in her $1,000 sealskin."

As this was a topic within the scope of his eldest daughter's intelligence she at once spoke up: "I never thought she needed to dress so plainly. I don't believe in such a show of poverty myself. If one is too poor to go decent, all right; but they say she had more money than most any one in town. I wonder who is going to get the benefit of it?"

"Why, Philemon of course. That is, as long as he lives. He doubtless had the making of it."

"Is it true that he's gone clean out of his head since her death?" interposed a neighbor who had happened in.

A month in Europe

HERE is an opportunity to see some of the famous places of the Old World at a modest outlay. A health-bringing trip and a liberal education combined. You take the "Royal Edward" at Montreal on July 15 for Bristol. Thos. Cook & Son will take charge of the party at Bristol and will bring them back to that point.

Visit in London the ancient Tower, the Abbey, Houses of Parliament, Museum, and haunts made famous by Dickens and Thackeray. Paris with her cafes and gay boulevards and buildings redolent of France's civilization. The Beach at Ostend, Brussels and its art galleries. Ghent and its great 1913 World's Exposition. Amsterdam and its canals and bridges. Antwerp, The Hague and the Isle of Marken. Quaint old Holland. And Bristol where one may visit some of the most interesting spots in England.

For full information and illustrated booklet apply any agent or H. C. DESROCHERS, 100 Queen Street West, Toronto, Ontario.

EXTENSION OF TIME

NOTICE is hereby given that the time for receiving tenders for dredging at Colingwood, Ont., is extended to Thursday, June 19, 1913.

By order,
R. C. DESROCHERS,
Secretary,
Department of Public Works,
Ottawa, June 4, 1913.

SEALED TENDERS

SEALED TENDERS addressed to the undersigned and endorsed "Tender for Postal Station 'G', Toronto, Ont." will be received at this office until 4:00 P.M. on Wednesday, June 26, 1913, for the construction of the building mentioned.

Plans, specifications and form of contract can be seen at the office of the undersigned at the office of Mr. E. J. Lennox, Architect, 105 Bay St., Toronto, Ont., and at the Department.

Persons tendering are notified that tenders will not be considered unless made on the printed forms supplied, and signed with their actual signatures, stating the occupations and places of residence. In the case of firms, the actual signature, the name of the occupant and place of residence of each member of the firm must be given.

Tender must be accompanied by an accepted cheque on a chartered bank, payable to the order of the Honourable the Minister of Public Works, to the sum of ten per cent. (10 p.c.) of the amount of the tender, which will be forfeited if the persons tendering decline to enter into a contract when called upon to do so, or fail to complete the work contracted for. If the tender be not accepted, the cheque will be returned.

The Department does not bind itself to accept the lowest or any tender.

By order,
R. C. DESROCHERS,
Secretary,
Department of Public Works,
Ottawa, June 2, 1913.

Newspapers will not be paid for this advertisement if they insert it without authority from the Department.—4060.
