Why Farmer Jones Refused to A cept Damages Done Him.

"I was attorney for a railroad running into Detroit," said the lawyer, "and one day a freight train killed sixteen hogs belonging to a farmer. Some of our trackmen had torn down his fence for some reason, and we were all to blame for the hogs being on the track. I was sent out to see the farmer, and of course I expected he would want at least three-times what the hogs were worth. I found times what the hogs were worth. I found him in his potato field, and when I told him who I was and my errand he invited me to the house to have a glass of cide and a piece of pumpkin pie. When we were through, he took me to look at his orchard and later on at his fowls, and it was two or three hours before I could find opportunity to say:

"'Now, Mr. Jones, let's get at those hogs. I understand there were sixteen of them?"

"'Yes; sixteen.'

"'And big ones?" "'Yes; all big ones."

"'And worth about how much apiece as they stood?' "'Waal, I should say $3 apiece."

"I knew that to be only about half their value," said the lawyer, "and I looked at the old man in astonishment we paid you $5 apiece for the sixteen?

"'Skassly, sir,' he replied,

"'Then shall we call it $6?

"'No, sir, I don't think so.'

"Well, what is your figure?

"'I hain't gut none,' he slowly replied.

"'I hain't got none,' he slowly replied.
'The railroad killed my hogs sure enough, but I ain't settin' no figger. Naybur Com-stock was tellin' me the other day that your railroad wasn't makin' any money to speak of, and I'm no man to pitch into a railroad when it's hard up. You just go back and tell your folks that I some-times git hard up myself and know how it is, and if they can pull through all right I'll be glad on't.'

"'Do you mean that you don't want any damages?' I asked. "That's what I mean. Your folks needn't worry a bit. I've talked it over with the old woman, and she says it's our duty to help railroads when they are in a tight squeak, and so them hogs don't count. If this condition had come suddenly it would have been unbearable. But the transition was gradual. A little more strain each day on the nerves. A little more drain each day of the vitality. WORK OF MAD MOB

MississippiFamily almost Wiped out by an Infuriated Mob.

After the Occupants had Been Riddled with Shot the Mob Set Fire to the House.

Meridan, Miss., Jan. 22.-One man and a woman missing and probably murdered, another woman, the mother of two children, hadly shot; four children desperately wounded by bullets and then left to perish in the flames of their dwelling, is the net result of the work of a fiendish mob in Kemper county.

Deputy Sheriff A. F, May returned from Calvert on the north boundary line yesterday, bringing details of an outrage that has sent a fhrill of hor-ror through the community. In the vicinity of Tolespo, in Kem-per county resided a family of Whites consisting of the man, wife and two consisting of the man, wife and two small children. Thursday night a kinswoman came to see them, and with her were two children about the same age as the White children. Some time during the night White was called to his door, and as he stepped out on the porch he saw a dozen or more men in the front yard.

White retreated and braced the door. The mob began calling for him to come out. After parleying for some minutes the mob fired a volley at the house, and then began one of the most terrific fusilades ever known in any of the most lawless sections Mississippi during the days of the Ku-klux. The doors were perforated with bullets and the windows were shot and battered until they left gap-ing holes through which the loads of backshot and rifle balls found targets in all parts of the house. Human flesh began to stop some of these missiles.

The children had been driven into a corner of the room where it was hoped they would be protected from the hail of lead, but soon the cries that went up showed to the frightened parents that the balls were going straight was firing volley after volley in re-turn, but could not see from the smoke that hung about the doors and windows whether he was reaching his assailants or not. After half an hour of heroic resistance the besieged man found that his ammunition was exhausted, and attempted to climb out a back window to the ground, hop-ing to make his escape. He had already been shot in several places and refused to yield his life without one desperate struggle.

When Mrs. White and her visitor saw the only man in the house dragging his bleeding form through the window, they jumped into a bed and pulled a heavy cotton mattress over them. It was fully half an hour after that before the shooting stopped, and the quiet outside indicated that the war was over.

When the frightened and wour women ventured to look out they saw that the roof of the house was in a blaze, and they hurriedly made their escape to the yard. Mrs. White was shot in the leg, and one bullet had made a flesh wound in the body. Her guest was badly wound she had to be carried and half dragged to the outside. In another moment the four children, if any were still living from the attack of the mob, were burned to death. May says the neighborhood is alnost paralyzed over the occurrence VALUE OF AN HONEST EYE.

Business Man's Experience In Hir ing an Office Assistant. A business man said that he once devoted half a day to hiring a man whom he needed in his office. In answer to his advertisement a great many applicants called. He rejected the first because he would not look him in the eye. "The second man," said the merchant, "was armed with a double barreled recommendation from his pastor, with testimonials as to his business ability and good character; but, though he looked me in the eye, I saw that we could never hope to get along well together, and so I dismissed him. The third interested me the moment he stepped inside the door. He was poorly dressed, and, though his clothes were whole, they were at least two sizes too small. It was evident that his attire troubled him not the least, for he held his head high and as he approached my desk looked me squarely in the eye. He said that he had no recmmendation, that he had no business experience, but that he was willing to do his best to please me. In an instant it dawned upon me that before me was the man that I was looking for. He had nothing to recommend him save an honest, bright eye and a pleasant face, but that was sufficient. I engaged him on the spot. "Since then I have seen fit to advance him over a man who had been with me three years. The latter grumbled, but there was reason for my move-the new man had proved himself worthy of promotion."

Instances might be definitely multiplied of the value of an honest eye. That wonderful window of the soul, the eye, is a sure index to character. If you have it not, cultivate a bright, bonest, straightforward look, It will more than repay your effort. Look up and fearlessly meet the eyes of those with whom you converse. Many a choice position has been lost through an indifferent, flinching eye, and many a coveted position has been won through a fearless, honest eye. That kind of eye is better than a hundred

The First Iron Ship. The first iron ship has more reputed birthplaces than Homer. Both the Clyde and the Mersey claim pre-eminence in this respect. Sir E. J. Robison of Edinburgh designed an iron ves sel in 1816, which was not launched till three years later, and it is said that an iron boat was worked on the Severn even as far back as 1787. Steel was not used in the construction of merchant ships' hulls until 1859. Old salts were not alone in their belief that wood was meant by Providence to float, but Iron to go to the bottom. A naval constructor of some repute once said: "Don't talk to me of iron ships. They are contrary to nature." Now none but small craft are built of wood
