A Terrible Fire at Tilbury at an Early Hour This Morning—Heavy Losses.

Special to The Planet.

Tilbury, Oct. 21.—About 4.30 this morning, fire broke out in the frame building of J. E. Scriven, occupied by G. Marchand as a grocery, who also lived upstairs.

The family narrowly escaped with their lives. The flames spread to the adjoining building to the north, occupied by C. A. Vanetten, of Chatham, as an implement shop, and to the south to a building which was being refitted by H. Johnston as an implement warehouse. Dr. Boyd, V. S., and Geo. McLaughlin, tailor, were also burned out, the last three having no insurance.

The loss will be probably $4,000, upon which there is but slight insurance.

The fire department, while a little slow, owing to lack of pressure in time, did some good work.

FOOTBALL

President Frank D. Laurie, of the Peninsular Football League is in receipt of the following letter from Wm. McDonald, of Detroit, secretary of the League in which it will be seen the Secretary will referee the game here on Saturday next with Darrell. The letter:—

Frank D. Laurie,

President of the P. F. A.,
Dear Sir,—Yours of the 15th received, and in reply would say that there will be no more trouble as far as the schedule is concerned, Windsor, Essex and Sandwich having agreed to play off at this end. Home and home games will be played. We have a protest in from Wallaceburg on your game of the 16th, which will have to be considered and at the first meeting taken up. It is my opinion that these protests should be left to the end of the season the schedule, and if a game one way or the other would effect the winner, then have it decided. It's an expensive matter having a meeting for every protest in this League. I will try to be with you Saturday. Hoping to see you Saturday, I remain yours respectfully,
W. McDONALD.

Perfect Cure for Bronchitis

This disease can be treated only by a remedy carried to the affected parts along with the air breathed, for nature intended these organs for the passage of air alone, and sprays, atomizers and internal medicines utterly fail. But Catarrhoxone doesn't fail, for it goes wherever the air breathed goes, and its healing antiseptic vapor is sure to reach every affected part. Catarrhoxone is inhaled at the mouth and after passing through every cell of the breathing organs is slowly exhaled through the nostrils. Catarrhoxone protects and heals the inflamed surfaces, relieves congestion, allays inflammation, and perfectly cures all bronchial affections. Price $1. Small size 25c. ## ORANGES

We are now receiving Jamaica oranges. These oranges are never an extra sweet orange and when they first came in a few weeks ago were almost as sour as lemons and as light in color. But the lot we received is much improved both in color and taste, they now have a good orange color and fair orange to eat. We have them in two sizes at 25c and 30c a dozen. Try them, we think they will suit the most of people.

Late Valencia Orange

These oranges are very small, but have a very thin skin, and are as sweet as honey. We sell them 40c a dozen.

URGES ACCEPTANCE

prompt acceptance of this proposition will secure to the anthracite mine workers and those dependent upon them a greater measure of justice than they could obtain by continuing the conflict; I believe that the prompt acceptance of this proposition will secure to the mine workers a greater degree of justice than they have enjoyed in the past.

ACCEPTANCE URGED.

"The people of our country await with anxious expectancy the result of your action for the eyes of the nation are centred upon you, and friends and foes alike demand the submission of issues involved in this strike to the tribunal nominated by the President of the United States. That there are discordant elements in this convention, that there are dissatisfied ones at home, I am fully aware, but, gentlemen, with all the earnestness of which I am possessed I urge that you give your approval to the action of your executive officers, who have recommended the acceptance of the proposition, that the strike be declared off, and all men are then to return to work in the positions and working places occupied by them prior to the inauguration of the strike, and that all questions at issue be submitted for adjustment to the tribunal selected by the President of the United States."

The address was followed with the closest attention by the delegates. Those who expected him to tell all he knew of the situation with reference to the arbitration commission and the question of having all the men obtain their former positions were disappointed, as he reserved this for his later remarks, when the question was actually brought before the delegates. At various stages of the reading of the address Mr. Mitchell was applauded, but when he recommended the delegates to adopt the recommendation of the executive boards to call off the strike and all men are then to work in the positions they occupied before the strike was inaugurated, tremendous applause greeted the remark.

A LIVELY DEBATE.

The moment he finished a Wilkes-barre delegate was on his feet, and moved that the recommendations contained in President Mitchell's address be adopted. If this had been acted upon at once the strike would have been off and the convention's work done, but those in opposition would not have it that way. They wanted to end the debate the matter until the adjournment after five o'clock. A Panther Creek engineer was the first to take the floor in opposition to accepting the plan until he and his colleagues had some assurance they would be reinstated in their old positions. "We do not know whether Peter Oliphant or John Markle is in the hall ready to vote on the proposition to come before the men," and moved that the convention adjourn.

After some speech making, President Mitchell again straightened out matters, by requesting all those, excepting newspaper men, who did not have credentials, to leave the hall. About half of these men retired. The question then reverted to the motion to adopt the recommendations of the officers to call off the strike and refer all questions at issue to President Roosevelt's commission.

The debate was resumed, the steam men leaving, but before the discussion had proceeded many minutes a delegate demanded that the credentials of all those in the building be examined, and that no one was in the place not entitled to admittance. This was done, and then a motion was made to reconsider the vote by which the newspaper men were permitted to remain in the hall. The motion was defeated.

The question again reverted to the question of reinstatement of men, and there was no further interruption in the discussion on this phase of the situation. A dozen speeches were made for and against the question of some specific action for assurance that the men would get back their places if they returned to work. It was argued by one delegate that the calling off of the engineers, firemen and pumpmen was a mistake, but as good union men they obeyed. He wanted the union to stand by those men now and not turn its back on them. Another delegate from the southern district declared that the organization should not send the men back to work until all of them were assured work. "If we are going to die," he declared, "let us all die together."

The only delegate in the convention who is a member also of one of the railway unions demanded something be done for the men who may fail to get back their former positions. "The positions for miners and mine laborers are numerous enough to give nearly all of them employment," he said, "but those for engineers, firemen and pump runners are not so numerous."

At this point a delegate arose and asked Mr. Mitchell to express his views on the subject. He immediately responded, and made one of the most important addresses he has been called on to make during the past five months. He spoke slowly and clearly, and every word was listened to with the deepest interest. It proved to be the real speech of the day. The strike leader spoke as follows: "Gentlemen of the convention, I desire to inform you that the President of your organization has done all he can to learn the attitude of the companies towards the men who are now on strike. As you know, the companies refuse direct negotiations with us. Through intermediaries we have received assurance that the companies are to meet the issues fairly; that they are not disposed to black list the men; they do not propose to be vindictive; that as far as possible men are to be returned to their old places. It may take some time before this can be brought about, and it may be that some few men will not be restored to their former positions at all. When you vote on this proposition you must do it with as full knowledge of the situation as I can give you. Now let me emphasize this point—that the poorest boy that worked in a breaker is as dear to us as the men who ran the engines; that while we shall try with all the power we have to get every man that struck back to his old job, we will make special efforts for none, and show special favors to none. We want the engineers and the firemen, and the pumpmen, and the inspectors, and the bosses to go back, but we do not want them to go back one by one; we want them to go back as a body. There was no single class of workmen who went out on a sympathetic strike. Every man who struck, struck for wages; he struck for exactly the same thing the miners and mine laborers struck for. As far as it is within the power of the union we shall afford protection to every man, union or non-union, who went out on strike with us. But, gentlemen, it may be true that some will be sacrificed, and much as we shall regret that, I desire to say that no battle was ever fought, no victory was ever won that did not carry with it some victims. Lives have been lost to gain the most brilliant victories that were ever won in the world. If it appeals to your judgment to accept the recommendation of your officers, if you decide to defer judgment of the President of your country, if you wish to be guided by the advice of your friends all over the land, and decide to return to work, the United Mine Workers of America will protect the man who happens to be left out of his job. In our pledge to the President of the United States, in which we notified him that we would recommend to you a resumption of work, we said to him that we should recommend a return of our people to their old jobs; and if the coal companies fail to give our men their old places, if they fail to treat them reasonably, we shall carry the question to the tribunal named by the President, and ask that tribunal to decide that we are entitled to the work we left when we went on strike. Now, gentlemen, those are my views. I have no assurance that if you return to work on Wednesday all of you will be given back your old places. I do believe, however, that the coal companies will gradually displace the men who have your jobs and give you your old places again. I dare say that thousands of men who were brought here from the cities and from the farms to take your places will return to the cities and farms when you go back. I have no doubt at all that before two or three weeks have rolled by there will be no question about the reinstatement of the men. However, remember this, that when your votes are cast I want you to cast them with the full knowledge that some of you may not get your old places back. I dare say the companies are as anxious to have competent engineers, firemen, pumpmen and inspectors as you are to fill those places, and you know that the men they brought here to take your places are not competent to run the hoisting engines; that the firemen they have brought here have not been successful, and while the companies will not go out before the public and say they will sacrifice the men who stood by them, as they call it, they will in most cases be glad to have their old and competent workmen back."

His remarks were greeted with applause. Another delegate made a speech against ending the strike without definite assurance of reinstatement, and Mr. Mitchell was again called upon for an explanation of the status of the arbitration plan as it now stands. In response to this request he said:— "We have not adopted their proposition as they made it. The proposition would never, with my consent, have been adopted as they made it. When the coal companies thought to practically name the arbitrators we objected, and secured a modification of their proposition. That modification enabled the President to select men outside of the class suggested by the operators. Organized labor is represented on the commission. I do not, however, assume that either the capitalists or the trade unionists who are on the commission will permit their special interests to influence their judgment in making their decision; but organized labor is on that commission, and it is there because the President of the United States wanted them there, and because we would not agree to the proposition unless it was there."

Then the delegates again took up the debate. Many of the delegates spoke with great earnestness. Three of them were willing to return to work and trust to the union to do justice to them. Another was willing to leave the whole matter in the hands of President Roosevelt's commission, and another said:—"If I can't get my job I can look for another one; therefore let us return to work and give the American people some coal."

The sentiment of the last speaker was loudly applauded.

After further debate on both sides it was decided to let the question go over until to-morrow morning.

A committee on resolutions was then appointed, and at 5.15 p. m. the committee adjourned until ten a. m., to-morrow. The resolutions committee met to-night and outlined a set of resolutions to be presented to the committee to-morrow. Nothing was given out to-night as to what they will contain. It is probable that they will recommend the acceptance of the arbitration plan; that all grievances be submitted to the commission appointed by President Roosevelt; that all men who shall not find immediate employment shall be taken care of by the union until they get positions, and that the organized labor throughout the world and other organizations and individuals be thanked for the assistance given the mine workers during their struggle.
