CONFEDERATION.

Yesterday Canadians celebrated the thirty-eighth annivefsary of the founding of the Dominion. On July A. 1867, the organized provinces of Danada were invited to form a confederation. The idea of union had, however, been in the air long before this, It had been a subject for debate for many years prior to the final act, R. J. Uniacke advocated it in the Nova Scotia legislature as early as 1809, while the father of the late Open Victoria advocated it in 1814. William Lyon Mackenzie spoke of it in 1831, and Bishop Strachan awarote of it in 1838.

Owing to the fact that the subject of Confederation had been so thoroughly discussed upon the bustings and in the public press, it was disposed of in parliament in comparatively brief, time. The parliament which passed Confederation met on Feb. 3. 1865, and dispersed, with its work completed, on March 10th, just five weeks being consumed in the passing of the most important legislation that ever effected the Dominion as a whole. The vote on the Confedera-tion question was 91 to 33. Thus the proposal carried by a majority of After parliament had taken action the principal members of the Government hastened to England to have the proposal embodied in an Im perial act-the British North Amer ica Act which we now have. This measure was passed on March 8, 1866.

into connection with the outside world was needed. Joseph Howe at this juncture, moved for the holding of a convention of the Maritime Provinces, to see what could be dong in the way of union. This meeting was called to meet in Charlottetowns P. E. I., in the summer of 1864. The meeting was attended by such mem as George Brown, John A. Macdonald, Charles Tupper, W. H. Pope, Alexander Galt, D'Arcy McGee, Hector Langevin, William McDougall, who died a few days ago, and Alexander Campbell. The argument of these gentlemen was for something larger than a union of the Maritime Prove inces, as at first anticipated. The majority prevailed and a second meeting was called for Quebce on Oct. 10, 1864. At Quebec the representatives of all the North American colonies assembled. Ontario and Quebec sent twelve delegates, Nova Scotia five, New Brunswick seven, Prince Edward Island seven and Newfoundland two There the draft of the terms of union was prepared. Three months later the Canadian Parliament met and adopted the arrangement, and subset quently the Imperial Parliament took

The results of the union have demonstrated the wisdom of the fathers of Confederation. They builded better than they knew. It is scarcely a generation since the act uniting the provinces of Canada was passed, and much in evidence. Political discord has given way to harmony. There has been a great industrial and commercial development that would have numstances than Confederation.

GOOD SOCIAL

A social was held last Friday even-day evening in the Sunday school hall at Thornetiffe. A good crowd was present. During the forepart of the evening a ball game was played be-tween Thornetiffe and Turnerville, resulting in a win for the home mine. It is an interesting fact that, within a radius of ten miles there were no less than eight church sowere no less than eight church so-cials in that vicinity Friday evenchecorated with red and white butting, flowers and plans on Sunday in honor of one of the greatest events in the parish, when a son of Mrand Mrs. Mathias Mindorf, of Harwich, but recently of Grey street, this city, said his first mass. It is always a great event in the church when a press says his first mass, but it is a still more impontant event when the celebrant is a child of the parish, as was the case on Sunday, consequently the spacious church was filled with worshippers, every available seat being occupied.

The young prist, Father, Claude (Mindorf), was esconted to the church in procession, Hubert Robert, as cross bearer, leading, Following him came the altar boys, members of the child rem's soldalties carrying banners, then three little tots, Myril Trudelf, Eleanor Twohey and Dorothy Dunn as pullow bearers, who wore dainty whate dresses with wreath and veilg as did the other girls in procession. Then came the Rev. Frs. James, Herman and Hubent, and theyoung celebrance, Rev. Fr. Claude, followed by his father and mother, brothers, sisters and relatives, making alltogether quite an imposing procescession in it passed up the centre juste of the church.

Rev. Fr. Paul, of Louisville, Kentucky, the formen believed pastor of St, Joseph's church, preached the sermon, the text for which was taken from Ecclestastics, "Honor God with thy wholes soul and do honor to his prest," In a very sloquent manner he spoke of the cause of the rejocing in the church on such an occasion as the when a newly ordained prise his prest," In a very sloquent manner he spoke of the cause of the rejocing in the church on such an occasion as the when a newly ordained prise in the church on such an occasion of loy for the congregation of Fr. The Rev. Father 'then dwelt for a few moments on the dignity of the presthood and the respect and reverence due the prest who was truly the representative of Christ here on earth, quoting the woods of the Saviour himself, "As the Father has sent me so do I also send you, to illustrate his remarks.

In a few touching words he addressed the young priest, telling him to go forth and preach. You are prove a priest of God and a son of good St. Francis.

The Rev. Faither brought to a close his very impressive sermon by remarking that he hoped all would be penetrated with a lively faith, that at the hour of death it would be their consolation to have with them a pricest of the church and that the happy gates of Heaven would open to receive them.
