THE WOMEN OF RUSSIA.

The women of Russia! How shall I describe them? writes Frank G. Carpenter in the Boston Globe. They are like no other women on the face of the globe, and still among their millions they have types of almost every race of woman known to man. In St. Petersburg you see the fair-haired, blue-eyed, freckle-faced maidens from Finland, walking the streets side by side with the red-haired girls who have been imported thither from the Caucasus and Georgia, and here at Moscow you see the Tartars, the Cossacks and the men in military uniform and the other different types of the eighty provinces of this vast empire. Along the Volga you will meet different costumes and different races of women at every landing place, and the girls of Little Russia wear different dresses having different manners from those of Great Russia. Here in Moscow there is a vast number of gipsies, and Russia has the harem of the Mahomedan, the polyandry of the Himalayas and all the varied combinations of civilized love and affection.

The Russian woman looks upon marriage much as we do, and of late years the relations of the sexes among the upper classes has been almost as free as they are with us. The Russian lady of-to-day has her friends among the young men of her own nation, and though she rarely goes out without a chaperone, she receives her callers in her own home and her ideal marriage is one of love. Of late years the laws of marriage have been radically changed, and the number of her suitors has increased between the ages of sixteen and thirty. Men cannot marry until they are over eighteen, nor after they are eighty, and divorce is less common in Russia than they are with us. The church of Russia objects to more than one marriage.

JOHNSON'S ANODYNE LINIMENT

UNLIKE ANY OTHER.

Originated by an Old Family Physician.
Think of it!
Every sufferer should have a bottle in his medicine chest.

For second and third marriages, and a man who marries a fourth time is excluded from the holy communion. Few are the women who marry again without the consent of the parents, and in most cases the woman is expected to bring a very respectable dot with her. I know of an American girl who recently married a Russian noble. The noble was a young man of twenty, and she celebrated in one of our large cities. Before it took place, however, the groom called upon the bride's father and asked about the settlement. "What settlement?" said the old man, who had considerable wealth, but who had not hitherto had a daughter marry a European baron. "The settlement upon my wife," was the reply. "Don't you intend to give her something at the time she is married?" "I had not thought of it," replied the old man. "But how much do you think she ought to have?" "Well," said the Russian noble with a hem and a haw, "it seems to me that she ought to have at least $50,000 and put the securities for it in the bank to his credit." "And how much may he expect to receive?" "He will receive the whole of it," replied the old man. "But how much do you think she ought to have?" "Well," said the Russian noble with a hem and a haw, "it seems to me that she ought to have at least $50,000 and put the securities for it in the bank to his credit." "And how much may he expect to receive?" "He will receive the whole of it," replied the old man.

INCIDENT.

SOME people in this town seem utterly incapable of appreciating a generous act, merely because a young man came to a young lady half a dozen times during the week, and occasionally drops in between meals. These are people who seem to insist that it is a matter of course that a young man should call upon a young lady every day, and that it is a matter of course that a young man should call upon a young lady every day, and that it is a matter of course that a young man should call upon a young lady every day.

They do not do the hard work of the peasant, nor have they the intelligence of their sisters of the nobility. The merchants of Russia form a large extent the middle class, and the merchants' wives and daughters are kept out of sight. They spend their time in dressing, smoking and eating, and their husbands, when they chat with their fellow women, usually speak of them as "the children of the devil," and they are full of all sorts of superstitions concerning them. In one of the Russian churches is a woman permitted to go into the inner sanctuary, and if one is going out hunting it is considered bad luck to meet a woman, and he had better turn back. The daughters of these merchants are often very religious and very superstitious. Their marriages are usually made by matchmakers, and the merchant is expected to give a good dowry with his daughter when she enters matrimony.

LONG ENGAGEMENTS

are not common, and they seldom last more than two or three months. Among the peasants the girls usually weave and embroider their own wedding gowns, and they begin to get ready for marriage as soon as they are old enough to sew. Among the merchants the short-haired girls, and the free-thinking girls of his time had a costume of their own, and one day, one of them met him on the street. She bowed to him as he passed by, and he, looking very curiously at her, returned her salute. The next day she received a summons from the police. She was tried, and she went to the superintendent, who told her that the Emperor had said he was much displeased with her, and she would have to sign an agreement not to cut her hair in the future, or go to prison. She signed the agreement.

SAILING OVER A VOLCANO.

A Seattle, Wash., special to the Chicago Herald says: Capt. H. S. Steward, of the schooner Dora Seward, met with a startling experience on his voyage from Copper Island, from which port he arrived at Alaska Sept. 25. When 50° 48' north of Victoria Sept. 25. When 50° 48' north of Victoria Sept. 25. When 50° 48' north of Victoria Sept. 25. When 50° 48' north of Victoria Sept. 25. When 50° 48' north of Victoria Sept. 25.

DURING THE CEREMONY.

When the whole service is over the bridegroom leads the bride to his house, where his parents greet him, and where they are blessed with bread and salt. The bride is then taken to the church, and it is the custom that the bride must pull off her husband's boots the first night of the marriage. In one of these boats, before going to the wedding, he usually carried a bag of gold or silver, but he did not take it with him. He had a very secret way. If she got the right boot the money belonged to her, and her husband had to draw off his own boots in the future. If she got the wrong one he had the right to use her as a bootjack whenever he pleased. This, however, was a custom only of the lower classes, and it is now more honored in the breach than in the observance.

THE RUSSIAN BRIDE,

however, has her happiest time just at the marriage. The peasant's wife has, perhaps, as hard a lot as any woman in the world, and this is especially so during the long years of her widowhood. The slave of her husband, and what is worse, she is usually the slave of her mother-in-law, and she is treated as badly as the widow is in India. Here, where the families of three generations often live together in a hut of one or two rooms, the young bride is not welcomed, and the husband can do little to protect her. The oldest man of the family is boss of the household, and the Russian author Tikhomirov gives a number of songs which illustrate how the bride is received into the family. In little Russia they say:
Who is to bring the water? The daughter-in-law.
Who is to be beaten? The daughter-in-law.
Why is she beaten? Because she is the daughter-in-law.
As soon as she comes into the family the older members of it make war against her.

ESCAPED AND RE-CAPTURED.

AUBURN, N. Y., Oct. 24.—Oliver Curtis Perry has been re-captured and is now safe within a dungeon cell in Auburn prison. The celebrated robber escaped from his cell Saturday afternoon and, after being hunted for some time, he was captured by a party of men from the State Prison. He was taken to the State Prison, where he was confined to his cell. He was re-captured and is now safe within a dungeon cell in Auburn prison.

POINTS ON FEEDING CATTLE.

In a recent address Prof. Robertson, said: "In the matter of feeding steers last winter at the central experimental farm, Ottawa, some information of great value to the farmers was brought out. Three sets of steers were put up to fatten. The ration of one lot was composed of hay, roots, and meal. The ration of the second lot was made up of corn ensilage and meal; in the third lot, the ration was a mixture of hay, roots, corn ensilage and meal. Those fed upon hay, roots and meal cost 19 cents per day. Those upon a mixture of hay, roots, corn ensilage and meal cost 15 cents per day. The steers which were fed upon corn ensilage and meal gained over 30 pounds each more than the others."

TO KEEP GUNS FROM RUSTING.

The best way to preserve a gun from rusting is to have a ring of zinc soldered round the barrel, or, if it is not convenient to do this, to have a long strip of zinc soldered out of sight underneath the barrel. The galvanic action which is excited between the zinc and the iron effectually prevents the oxidation of either metal, and so long as the zinc remains in contact with the iron not a particle of rust will appear on either the inside or outside of the barrel.

MOTHER'S DAY.

A Homely Story, but True - Does it Apply to Yourself?

She was a woman of about thirty, the wife of a prosperous farmer. There was not a picturesque or unusual point about her; she was tall, lean and round-shouldered. Indeed, as she walked with long strides from the kitchen to the cellar, the cow-yard or the wood-shed, she bore an absurd likeness to the gaunt hound that followed her.

Her day was not eventful. She rose at four in the morning, and made up the fire in the stove. Her husband and two sons were asleep at breakfast, and she poured out the coffee and baked the cakes which they ate. After they had finished she ate her own breakfast if she cared for any. Then came washing or ironing or scrubbing until it was time for the heavy noon meal. Her husband and her daughters used sometimes to help a little, but in an idling, half-hearted way. Sometimes she would drive them out with a queer patrician smile.

"Young folks like pleasure. They ought to have their fun," she would say. There was the morning work to finish after the dinner was over. It was a large farm and the men were hearty eaters. She "laid down" great quantities of meats and canned and dried vegetables.

After supper was over, every body found some recreation but mother. The farm was smoked, the young people visited the neighbors or gathered at one end of the porch chattering and laughing. Mother was inside at work, sewing or with her great basket of stockings.

"They like their fun," she would say. She looked at them again sometimes as if, old as she was, she would like some fun, but she never joined them. They were with their friends when they had made at college and school. Mother had been very little at school when she was young. Besides, she had no time for idling. Sometimes when she was making shirts for the boys, she worked until midnight.

One evening her youngest girl read her a story, which she thought would suit her mother's intellect. It touched and pleased her greatly. She spoke of it for a year afterward.

One of her days was like all the others, except Sunday, when she had time to go to church. She was very happy there, but especially when they sang any hymn which she had known as a girl; she would join, scarcely above her breath, for she knew her voice was cracked.

When strangers remarked that she was growing thin, her children replied that it was no wonder. Mother's everyday would wear the flesh from any woman's body. Her appetite failed; the very smell of the salt meat and cabbage which she cooked nauseated her. She used to listen eagerly to the tales of the world, but she never noticed it. Mother had always been the motive power, which had kept the whole machinery in motion. It never occurred to anybody that the power could be exhausted.

One day, however, when they came down to breakfast, the table was not spread, and no fires were lighted. For the first time, when she was needed, mother lay in her bed still and quiet. She would never work for them more.

After they had buried her they knew how much they loved her. Their grief was sincere and deep. They never weaned in talking of her unfeeling gentleness, her tender patience, her perfect unselfishness.

MOCK MARRIAGES.

TORONTO, Oct. 24.—There is quite an interesting story in connection with the arrested in Detroit the other day of William MacPherson, late of Toronto, for bigamy. MacPherson is credited with about ten wives, two in Detroit, one in Toronto, a couple in Cleveland, and some in Illinois. MacPherson's story is as follows: "The only woman I ever was married to is the Toronto woman you speak of. Ten or twelve years ago I was arrested, during the ceremony at St. James Cathedral, corner of King and Church streets. One son was the result of our union. Four or five years ago we had some trouble about another man who was paying attention to her, and then followed a separation. We were never divorced, simply had a bill of separation made out. They are living in Toronto now."

NEILL'S ALLEGED CONFESSION.

LONDON, Oct. 24.—The alleged confession of Neill, the prisoner, is said to have been made in confidence before he was sentenced. He has seen no one but the gaol officials since sentence was passed on him. Neill's counsel are hopeful of getting from America affidavits which will justify home secretary Asquith in releasing the prisoner on the ground of insanity, resulting from the use of narcotics. Such evidence is likely to be counteracted, however, by the results of a medical investigation. It has been learned that Neill was exceedingly popular among women of light reputation on account of his generosity. He is in great trouble now about his diet. He only stipulates that he shall have the full allowance of beer. He eats sparingly and has become restless, sullen and irritable. English and American firms of showmen are clamoring for his possessions.

TO REMEMBER JOHNSTON'S ANODYNE LINIMENT.

And so you left your mistress through having hard words with your young man? Well, mum, not words, mum—not adactly what you might call words, mum. I only spoke to her as one lady might to another.

To avoid a cold and lameness from wetting, rub the chest with Johnson's Anodyne Liniment.

Parker—Who was that tough I saw you with to-day, Hiker? That man was my twin brother. Parker—Forgive me, old man. I ought to have known.

CORK STATION.

Oct. 18.—A box social in aid of the R. C. church was recently held at the residence of Mrs. Hurley. The boxes, many of which were handsomely decorated, were auctioned by John Petty, and realized the sum of $85. Many thanks are due the committees for the successful management of the social, and also to the ladies who generously contributed the boxes.

We are glad to learn that Mrs. Daley, who was quite ill, is recovering.

Messrs. Bell, of Carleton county, were here last week buying lumber for exportation to our American friends. They report the market for lumber lower than for several years.

We are sorry to hear of the serious illness of Mrs. Thomas Danohoe.

Mr. Collins, of Fairville, and D. Holland, of Harvey Station, paid us a flying visit the 17th inst. They were the guests of Mrs. John Maloney.

The many friends of Miss Annie Maloney welcome her home from Calais, where she has been the past year.

Spokane matrimonial fever has reached this vicinity, and the merry wedding bells are pealing. An interesting event took place Wednesday, 18th inst., which united in the holy bonds of wedlock, John McGrath, one of Acton's promising young men, and Miss Mary Keeffe, a popular young lady of this place. The happy couple were married by Rev. W. O'Leary. Miss Kattie Hurley was bridesmaid, and the groom was supported by his brother, Neil McGrath. The many friends of the contracting parties wish them a happy and prosperous voyage through life.

THE BARONY.

Oct. 25.—John Anderson, Jr., of St. John, spent Sunday at his father's.

Fred Hall, of St. John, spent last week with his friends in this place.

E. Tru and family, of Poquik, left for Woodstock to-day, where they intend to make their home.

Mr. and Mrs. I. S. Atherton returned last week from a short trip to Ox Bow, Maine.

Mrs. C. H. Atherton leaves this week for Bangor to spend a few weeks with her sons.

J. J. Moore, the popular merchant of Poquik, has sold his property to J. R. Scott and moved to Bear Island where he has opened a store. Although sorry to see Mr. Moore and family leave, we are pleased to welcome Mr. Scott in his place, and wish him every success.

Miss Laura M. Ebbett is visiting friends in Fredericton.

Mrs. John Anderson arrived yesterday from St. John, where she has been visiting her son, W. A. Anderson.

A SPECIFIC FOR HICCOUGH.

Henry Tucker recommends in the Southern Medical Record, the use of the following very simple remedy in the treatment of hiccough, namely: "Moisten granulated sugar with good vinegar. Of this give to an infant from a few grains to a teaspoonful. The effect, he says, is almost instantaneous, and the dose seldom needs to be repeated. He has used it for all ages—from infants of a few months old to those on the downhill side of life, and has never known to fail. The remedy is certainly a very simple one, and although no theory is advanced to account for its wonderful action, it merits trial."

OVERWHELMED BY A FLOOD.

CALGARY, Oct. 24.—A most appalling calamity has befallen the village of San Spence, situated in the province of Alberta. It is estimated that not less than 200 of the villagers have been drowned. The flood swept through the village with sudden fury, and in a moment the streets became rivers that carried everything before them. Houses were lifted from their foundations and carried whirling down by the floods. Their occupants did not have an opportunity to attempt to save themselves. Many of them were asleep when the torrent carried out their homes, and were awakened only to find themselves struggling in the water. Men, women and children were drowned and not a single effort could be made to save them so sudden was the disaster. Half the houses in the village were swept away. The place is isolated by the flood and access to it is very difficult.

We'll write it down till everybody sees it. Till everybody is sick of seeing it. Till everybody knows it without seeing it. Till Dr. St. John's Calais Remedy cures the worst cases of chronic catarrh in the head, catarrh of the head, and "cold in the head." In perfect faith, its makers, the World's Dispensary Medical Association of Buffalo, N. Y., offers to pay $500 to any one suffering from chronic catarrh in the head who they cannot cure. Now if the conditions were reversed—if they asked you to pay $500 for a positive cure you might hesitate. Here are reputable men, with years of honorable dealing; thousands of dollars and a great name back of them; and they say—"We can cure you because we've cured thousands of others like you—if we can't we will pay you $500 for the knowledge that there's one whom we can't cure." They believe in themselves. Isn't it worth a trial? Isn't a trial preferable to catarrh?

THE BORDEN MURDER TRIAL.

FALL RIVER, Mass., Oct. 24.—A local paper says it is reported on good authority that Lizzie Borden will not be tried for the murder of her father before the February term of court, provided, of course, the grand jury brings in a bill against her. It is said that it will be impossible to secure three justices who can preside before February, as the engagements of the bench will occupy it fully up to the second month in the next year.

"Remember Johnson's Anodyne Liniment," said an old man, "when I was a boy." Same now.

And so you left your mistress through having hard words with your young man? Well, mum, not words, mum—not adactly what you might call words, mum. I only spoke to her as one lady might to another.

To avoid a cold and lameness from wetting, rub the chest with Johnson's Anodyne Liniment.

Parker—Who was that tough I saw you with to-day, Hiker? That man was my twin brother. Parker—Forgive me, old man. I ought to have known.
