

THE INVICTUS

A shoe for well-dressed men. Costs enough to insure a perfect shoe, but is as low as a shoe of this character can be sold. Seen beside a cheaper shoe, the difference is unmistakable. Men who want appearance, satisfying wear, and solid comfort, should wear the "Invictus Shoe."

Two Leading LEATHERWARE Lines

In Shoes; Low Prices and Cheapness

Are as far apart as the Poles. Cheapness in Shoes does not depend upon their price, but upon the service they give. To maintain the Low Price of cheap shoes it is necessary to use even more inferior leather than usual. That can only result in one thing—less service—less wear—therefore less economy. No substitution of inferior stock has been made in either of our two Leading Lines for Men and Women.

ON ALL FRONTS.

LONDON, July 26.
The Allies are able to congratulate themselves on another good day's record, with the capture of the important position of Pozieres on the Western front, and Erzincan in Armenia, while the Russian General Sakharoff in the fighting on the Sionevka River, has captured another 4,000 prisoners and five guns. The British Secretary of War, Lloyd George, published a statement to-night which shows the importance of the German attack to the retention of Pozieres, by quoting from a German divisional order, issued at Contalmaison, on July 11th, as follows: "Furthermore, the conversion of the villages into strong points is of greatest importance. Such villages are Pozieres, Contalmaison and the two Bazantins and Longueval." Secretary Lloyd George points out that with the capture of Pozieres the last of these villages and places into the Allies hands. He further points out that to-day's German claim of the repulse of an attack on Trones Wood must be a clerical error, as Trones Wood has been in British possession since July 14. The opinion of military critics in London is that no positions so strong as those the British are now attacking will be found between Pozieres and Bapaume, otherwise, they argue, the Germans would not have risked bringing troops and guns from the Verdun sector to defend Pozieres. It is inferred from indications in official despatches that the British are already beginning to establish themselves on both sides of the road from Pozieres to Bapaume.

As on the West front, the German and Austrians appear to be unable to make a successful stand anywhere against the victorious Russian forces. General Sakharoff's recent success has brought him within about twelve miles of Brody, which guards the approaches to Lemberg and places into the hands of the Russian army. The expected swift fall of Erzincan leads to the supposition here that the Turks must have been unable to assist the armies in the field, not anticipating such a rapid Russian advance in such a difficult country. The Italian front attracts little public interest, but the Italians recently have been making good progress in Dolomites region.

BRITISH CAPTURE POZIERES.

LONDON, July 26.
The village of Pozieres has been completely captured by the British, according to an official announcement made to-day. The text of the statement follows: "The whole village of Pozieres is now in our hands. We of the village our territorial troops made a further advance and captured two strong trenches and a number of prisoners, including five officers. Elsewhere on the battlefield there was no change."

The capture of Pozieres gives the British troops domination of the highest point overlooking the plateau on which the German lines tend to the eastward.

Her Friends (?) Advice.

By RUTH CAMERON.

Can you equal it?

Who has more influence over the boy who spends his time away from home—his boy companions or his parents? We all know the answer to that, and a sad answer it often is.

Who Has The Most Influence With A Boy?

Who, then, is going to have the greatest influence with these boys? Their companions, of course, who are in this case those who love them best.

But I didn't take up the subject to prove a point which is practically an axiom (interfering friends to the contrary). I've just mentioned it as an introduction to the picture of her home life which my letter friend has given me.

Here it is:
"I have two boys, twelve and fourteen years of age. They are great home-loving boys. The oldest one is a great reader. We have always tried to give him the best of books; his father reads the same books and magazines he reads, to try to keep up with his reading."

The Kind Of Home Other Children Come To.

"Nearly every day some of his boy companions come home from school with him; they take the afternoon up in reading.

"The other one also brings his companions home with him; they indulge in games such as rook, checkers and many other house games. They play the piano, cornet, violin and bugle; both being scout boys, of course they love a bugle.

"We have always tried as best we could to make their home as pleasant as possible, although we only have a little bungalow.

Clean Rugs Versus Clean Hearts.

"Their father and I have always been more companions than parents. It is not that we forbid them to run the streets, but they stay in because they say we have a better time at home. People sometimes ask why I allow the boys to bring their companions home in all kinds of weather in mud and snow. Well, they are always happy to be here, and I say to myself that with a little trouble I can clean the druggets, and I know where the boys are and that they are happy, which makes me happy.

"After the boys leave, my boys are looking forward to the night coming of their father, and after supper they all play rook until about ten o'clock. Then follows the question I quoted. She signs her appeal, "An anxious mother." I don't think she needs to be. On the contrary, I think she might have written her experience for the benefit of other mothers and (with the one alteration that the boys ought to have a little more fresh air and go to bed a little earlier) she might have called it "The Experience of a Perfectly Successful Mother."

North Dakota.

By GEORGE FITCH.
Author of "At Good Old Siwash."

North Dakota is a broad, flat state with a mind of its own, when LaPollette isn't using it, and about enough history to fill a sovereign postal card. It was discovered in 1870, massacred in the fifties, admitted to the Union in 1889, and has had several blizzards and a presidential primary. More about North Dakota's history would be a waste of words.

North Dakota is part of the old territory of Dakota which was taken into the Union in two gulps, viz.: North and South Dakota. The former has 70,000 square miles which are sowed to wheat each year, and a population that looks at the wheat report before it looks at the baseball score. When wheat is a bumper crop North Dakota puts storage tanks around its national banks, but when the spring is dry a book agent could walk across the state without getting a chance to take out his prospectus.

North Dakota is also noted for its vast ranches and farms. Land was once worth $5 a township, and those far-sighted men who bought a few thousand dollars' worth, now have farms so big that it takes four men on ponies to get the morning paper out of the R. F. D. box at the front gate before it is stale.

North Dakota was first noticed by Jim Hill about thirty years ago. He built the Great Northern across the upper end and has since built so many branches into the wheat fields that the road looks like the skeleton of a trout on the map.

Being just under the Canadian border, North Dakota is plentifully supplied with winter, which begins shortly after September, and lasts until even the coal dealers are tired of it. The thermometer often drops to 50 degrees below in the state, but nobody minds it because it usually drops to this mark from 45 degrees below. The snowfall is very liberal, especially on the railroad tracks, and all summer long officials keep discovering trains which were mislaid during January.

North Dakota afternoons last until tea o'clock in the summer and the people spend them reading progressive literature. The state is so progressive that it regards Roosevelt as a conservative.

HARVEST TIME.

Arise and work a spell in the neighborhood! The farmers call for men to labor. A thousand miles of wheat is standing, the strength of harvesters demanding. The farmers shriek for husky fellows who're sound in wind and limb and bellows, to toil behind the clanging reaper—get busy, then, O dreamer, sleeper! Alas, you will not lift a finger! Around the village pump you linger; to honest toil you are not partial; you'd rather roast the statesman Marshall, or prove that Woodrow Wilson's record in politics is gravely checkered, or show that Hughes is misbehaving by his antipathy to shaming, than go forth where the harvest rages, and gather in a prince's wages. The wheat is spoiling, say the grangers.

ers; exposed to multiplying dangers, because there are not men to reap it, and in the shocks and windrows heap it. It surely seems a crime and pity that every village, town and city, must have its string of idle talkers when fields of wheat are needing shockers. Go forth and drill along the stubble, and ease the farmer's mind of trouble!

What Are You Doing for that Eczema?

"Nothing; I've about given up trying to cure it."
"That is not wise. Do as I did and you will probably be cured in a short time. I used Zylex and Zylex Soap with it and my Eczema began to improve at once. A couple of boxes cured. You can get Zylex at your druggists."

Small Patrol Took German Field Fort.

Nine Frenchmen, by Clever Ruse, Frightened Garrison of Blaches Fort Into Complete Surrender.

Paris, July 19.—One of the most striking episodes of the great Somme offensive was the taking of the field fort at Blaches and the garrison of one hundred and thirteen men by nine French soldiers. The fort had resisted throughout the artillery bombardment and the infantry attacks had been checked by numerous machine gun fire.

By a lucky chance a French officer discovered the precious secret that the terrible bombardment had made the fort vulnerable at one point. Selecting a second lieutenant, two sergeants, a corporal and four men, he led them on hands and knees through the long grass to the spot where he knew there was a breach in the defences. They reached their objective point without the Germans learning of their approach.

Rushed In Boldly.
Abruptly three of the French officers, leaped into the work shouting in stentorian tones "forward with the bayonet," and throwing bombs which exploded in the dugout. The other six daring Frenchmen remained behind ready to retreat if the attempt failed.

But the Germans, taken unaware, had no time to get their weapons, and surrendered almost without a show of fight. When one of their number fell shot by a revolver fired point blank by the commanding French officer, the Germans, one hundred and thirteen in all, came out of their shelters and threw up their hands, the French asserted.

The three French captors now began to feel nervous as they saw no reason why the Germans should not fall upon them and exterminate them. But at this moment the other six hurried in. Their resolute energy imposed upon the Germans who believed that the new arrivals were followed by many others. The German officers in the fort then threw down their arms and the entire garrison was marched to the French rear, escorted by the nine captors, who had not lost a man.
