Being Unsportsmanlike About Bill.

By RUTH CAMERON.

RUTH CAMERON

Sometimes ago I wrote about the way in which women use, abuse and misuse all the privileges the department stores give with each other in giving them (I wonder if women realize that the extension of these privileges is one of the reasons that the department stores find it hard to pay their girls what they should. Surely if they did they would be willing to forego such costly rights as changing things so freely and having even the tiniest bundle sent.)

At that time I believe I said that men were more fair about matters pertaining to business dealing than women.

When Men and Women Are Equally Unscrupulous.

I have just had my attention drawn to one matter in which men and women are equally unscrupulous.

And that is in their attitude toward any merchant who tries to have them pay back bills.

A recent discussion of the credit system, several merchants wrote me letters. One of them told of a man who had owed a small bill of two dollars for over a year. He had rendered this bill in monthly accounts (at a cost of thirty-two cents) and then one day when the man was in the store had called it to his attention. The man had paid it, and then had said angrily, "That is the last time I will ever trade in your store."

Again, a dentist once told me that a certain young man owes him sixty dollars. This man was making little money at the time the bill was contracted so the dentist was patient, but since then he has had money left him and has a machine and many other luxuries. Yet he entirely ignores the dentist's bill.

Why He Couldn't Send a Bill Collector.

"Why don't you send a bill collector?" I asked.

"Couldn't do that," he said, "because I have several of his relatives for my patients and they would all leave me."

There's two examples of what I call a thoroughly unjust attitude toward business dealings on the part of men and women alike.

To retaliate against a perfectly just measure such as the merchants asking for the two dollars or the dentist's sending a bill collector, by withdrawing one's trade, is downright mean and unfair.

Honor Ought to Keep You From Using Your Power.

To be sure, you have the power but honor ought to withhold you from using it.

A good sportsman would say, "I got what I richly deserved."

Suppose the people who paid your salary paid you that way, where would you be? And these people have bills to pay just as you have.

Letting bills run like that unless you are hard pushed (and even then you could surely plan to pay a certain proportion on them week by week) or unless there is some question of adjustment that you are not satisfied with, is an unsportsmanlike thing to do and kicking when your creditors kick is still more so.

GERMAN PEACE.

WALT MASON

For peace that's made in Germany the allies do not care; it would be cheap and sure, and would be wanted to wear. The peace the Kaiser's pondering, and planning with a gun, would surely fade in lauding the colors all would run. This war! The world is hating it, but peace would be more punk with Germany dictating it, and handing out the bunk. The allies are much wiser than arguing with Kaiserdom about the terms of peace. When peace is given us, and people know repose, and war's red dog, that's driven us, back to its kennel goes, that peace must be no platitudes, no phrases neatly turned, of wide and yielding latitude, to be ignored or spurned. No paper written gaudily, whose terms may be withstood, no fabric woven shoddily, or "something just as good." When gentle peace has come again, it must have come to stay; no king shall make things hum again by starting up a fray. The peace that comes from Germany would last 'till Kaiser Bill should once again determine he was strong enough to kill.

THE REFRIGERATOR

The refrigerator is a popular kitchen utensil which holds everything successfully but ice. For some reason or other, as soon as ice is placed in a refrigerator it begins to shrink and finally evaporates in the form of sawdust and water, which is later deposited in a neat puddle on the kitchen floor by the law of gravity.

Refrigerators are filled with mournful regularity and by an independent citizen who owns the only ice-house in town and is extremely deliberate in his movements. Nobody ever saw an iceman who was in a hurry to reach an empty refrigerator before last night's milk was turned into a cottage cheese. One of the saddest epochs in the life of woman is to place a large pan of undiluted milk in the refrigerator, wearing a thick coating of cream on its bosom, and then discover that during the night it has turned sour from the ankles up, owing to the ice having gone out the back way. If there were some way to pen up a fifty-pound chunk of ice in a refrigerator so it could not escape on the instalment plan, there would be more happy and contented housewives.

All kinds of foods can be placed in a first-class refrigerator without fear of infecting any of its neighbors. This is proven by setting a mammoth white onion alongside a fresh brick cheese, neither of which will affect the taste of the other. This experiment, which is widely used for demonstrating purposes, ought to satisfy the most hardened skeptic.

Before the refrigerator was invented people had to keep food that was subject to sunstroke in the cellar, which required the housewife to chase up and down stairs at a depressing canter. As this wore out the cellar stairs and also the lower limbs of thousands of estimable wives, the keen, analytical mind of man brought out the refrigerator with an overflowing drain pipe which is filled with ice weighed by the calculating eye of the iceman. Some icemen have excellent eyesight and can measure one hundred pounds of ice to a thousandth of an inch, but others are troubled with chronic, double-barreled astigmatism and should have their vision operated on by the grand jury.

The refrigerator does not cost so much to run as a hard-coal furnace, but it needs more watching than a married man of gay and festive instincts.

A savory dish for a winter day is cooked sausage minced fine, mixed with mashed potatoes and browned in the oven.

CHARGES ALLIES' AIMS TOO FAR.

LONDON

A. J. Balfour, Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, replying in a speech to a peace motion proposed by Lees Smith, Lib. member for Southampton, declared that the Allies had carried their demands beyond their original aims. He stated that the recent motion, many, in addition to Lord Lansdowne, was to be decided by the House of Commons. He had been confirmed in a resolution of the French Chamber of Deputies, Foreign Secretary, also, in a secret agreement, there was such an agreement. He stated that it was a mistake to believe that the Allies had made between France and while Nicholas was Emperor, was carried out, said that there would be a new series of discontent and discord, which would once again, in the war blood.

U.S.-DUTCH AGREEMENT RE-NEWED

WASHINGTON

An early agreement between the United States and the Netherlands to allow Dutch tonnage in American waters was seen here to-day to be the by the war trade board. The steamer Nieuw Amsterdam, for turn trip across the Atlantic vessel will leave the American shortly carrying as cargo part of freight for Holland. The tons of corn for Belgium, several hundred hundred passengers. With such a load, it is expected for the operation of Dutch mines, will make up part of the cargo. Licenses for the New Amsterdam's cargo was held by the American authorities when the Government refused to give it for safety as soon as each other side. In the negotiations followed the American government refused to concede from its position and finally the Dutch yielded. An agreement as to the operation of other Dutch vessels held in American ports was believed to-night to be sight. The principal clauses of agreement, it is reported, will provide that a large number of Dutch ships enter the American trade to release American cargo for overseas service. That of the tonnage be placed in the Dutch East Indies to the benefit of Holland and the Allies, and limited number of ships to permit to ply between Holland and America carrying cargoes to be approved by the War Trade Board. The ships will sail in the Atlantic from the U. S. from many of the earth. Some came from Dutch East Indies and many
