Terrible Collapse

Of a Four-Story Brick Building in Buffalo.

Between 15 and 20 People Buried in the Ruins.

Some Fatally Injured Persons Recovered -The Work of Rescue-Sad Sight.

Buffalo, N. Y., May 21 .- A loud crash. the breaking of timbers, sound of falling bricks, shricks of men. united in startling people in the vicinity of Main and Seneca streets about 9:20 o'clock this morning. What seemed at first to be an awful calamity, involving great loss of human life moment's warning while a large number of men were at work in the building remodeling it. The building went down upon a cou-ple of smaller brick buildings adjoining on the east side and practically demolished them. Schnert's barber shop, next door to the falling building, was crushed like an egg shell. It was full of barbers and customers, and it was certain that all of them did not get out alive. Quickly responding to an alarm, a force of bremen were put at work clearing away haste, hurling brick and broken iron and timbers into the street, for they heard as they worked, the agonized cry of men beneath them. In the street a terrible illustration of the disaster, flowed a stream of blood from those who had been stricken of blood from those who had been stricken and broken hour and show. The walls on the west, north and south sides stood nearly intact. The front walls having fallen out, gave the ruins the appearance of a hollow square. Buffalo, May 21.—Like good, solid life-savers, the firemen at the wrecked Brown building turned to and worked as though their own lives depended on the struggle. A DECREPIT STRUCTURE. When the Western Union moved Crerar for respondents. of the Brown Building, which is an old, decrepit structure of 40 years' standing, their dynamos and engines were taken out of the basement, and contractors were employed to remodel and reconstruct the building. they attempted to do by running braces under the floor joists, upheld by piers, to bear the weight of the superstructure while some of the par-titions were removed. The immediate cause of the collapse was the removal of part of the foundation walls. There were but few tenants in the building, and they were advised that they would not be disturb-ed by the rehabilitation. The contractors' names cannot be learned at this writing, as there is every at-tempt to shift the responsibility from masons to carpenters. The district attorney says, how-ever, that if it can be shown that the contractors and owners were guilty of negligence he will prosecute them for manslaughter. Buffalo, May 21.-Another victim has

Little Things Count

A little advice of the right kind often puts a person in the way of success; if it's the wrong kind it leads the other way. A little sensible talk often moulds opinions. A little lie often sells goods, but a little lie never puts quality in them. Perhaps nothing brings better and more lasting results than the little price on high quality, stylish goods. Memorial to O'Reillu. Patriotism and Poesy Linked in Portraiture and Allegory.

the Patriot and Poet.

Boston Herald.

Blending, as it will, the elements of portraiture and of allegory, which so rarely consort in art, and fitly combining the inspiration of poesy and patriotism, the memorial to John Boyle O'Reilly, the Irish author and patriot, will be unique among artistic conceptions in Boston, and appropriately so, as it is designed to embody the real COUNTRY. as it is designed to embody the real and the ideal in one of the most diversely gifted personalities that our land has greeted. It is the outcome of the concensus of tributes from various classes and races which clamored for expression on that sad summer morning, five years ago, when the tidings came that he who was beloved by his adopted, not less than his native country-for his endowments of nature, not more than his endearing qualities of heart-had been summoned away forever. Mr. A. Shuman, who contributed very largely, both by funds and personal effort, to the raising of the fund of $20,000 necessary for the contract, acted as treasurer during the major portion of the time, and, in conjunc tion with Hon. P. A. Collins and Mr. Thomas B. Fitzpatrick, served in permanent trusteeship of the sum for the monument. The contract was given to Mr. Daniel Chester French, of New York, formerly of Boston, who has been characterized by O'Reilly's biographer and successor, Mr. James Jeffrey Roche, as "a poet who writes in marble and bronze;" and who has achieved fame by his works representing the story of ville. Music was furnished by the home lodge choir, assisted by Miss also the Minute Man and of the Angel of Death arresting the hand of the young sculptor, Martin Milmore. Mr. Roche says of him, "He moulds in clay as the great painter mixes his colors, with brains and poetry. So also he has told the story of O'Reilly, whose monument is a little more elaborate, but none the less impressive." The design of the O'Reilly memorial is of a more composite and elaborate character than most of Mr. French's previous ones, a duality of sentiment being found in its setting forth the sentiments of patriotism and poetry, which were inseparably blended in the subject, and its treatment of these, through the instrumentalities of alleed in due form, and proceeded with gory and portraiture. Between these majestic monolith of granite 15 feet high, 7 feet wide and 3 feet deep, on one face of which is carved a Celtic speeches from the visiting brethren, bust of the poet, with a superbly modinviting repasts were partici- fitting idealization, is evidenced from the fact that the artist had the benefit of the mask taken from the face soon after death, as well as of the various portraits and busts previously made, and particularly of the advice and discernment of Mrs. O'Reilly, who spent nine days in New York for the express purpose of giving the artist her judgment of the work as it prospered. Her standard was naturally a igh and exacting one, and it was reached by the artist to her satisfaction.

On the other side of the monolith is the allegorical presentation, comprising three figures, all in bronze, the central one being Erin, as a mourn ing mother, wearing a chaplet of shamrocks for her son. On her left is a winged youth embodying Poesy. He bears a lyre and bends lovingly in tribute to Mother Erin, adding his laurels to her chaplet, On the other side is a stalwart Milesian warrior, embodying the martial and patriotic spirit, which, like that of Poesy, was an essential part of O'Reilly's nature. This figure is designed Patriotism, and is represented as contributing a hand-ful of ash leaves to Erin. All the faces and outlines are of marked grace and fidelity of expression, in keeping with the sentiment they set forth, the tender sympathy of Mother Erin, the lofty inspiration of Peesy and the resolute devotedness Unique Tribute in Stone and Brenze to of the Celtic warrior as Patriotism, presenting a group which is rarely rivaled for individual excellence as well as consummate unity in the purpose to which they are tributary. The unveiling of this memorial, which is now expected to take place on the 13th of June, will be one of the most interesting events of its character that has taken place in Boston. President Cleveland has been invited to attend, and Secretary of State Olney to be the orator of the day, and they are expected to accept the
