A Pleasing Romance of An Essex Hotelkeeper

Rewarded With $50,000 for Saving Man From the Gallows.

Years Ago Gave Up All He Had to Fight Case for His Brother.

The Latter After Acquittal Went to Chili and Became a Millionaire.

Windsor, Nov. 8. — Joseph Aubin, who for several years past has conducted a small hotel in the village of McGregor, Essex county, awoke, yesterday morning, to find himself a comparatively rich man, and with the promise that his wealth will be materially added to in the very near future. The announcement of his good luck came in the form of a bank draft for fifty thousand dollars, made payable to his order by Jacques Caza, now a resident of Chili. A letter accompanied the money, and stated that the sender was not unkindly disposed towards Aubin, and that he was now in the fight for his life in the courts. It seemed certain he must go to the gallows. He had about abandoned all hope when young Aubin came forward with his life savings, amounting to about $10,000, and with this money Aubin engaged a lawyer and such a strong defense put up that the prisoner was finally acquitted. Caza afterwards left his native city, and his relatives heard no more of him until his letter and munificent present arrived yesterday. Caza writes that he has prospered greatly, and is now regarded as a millionaire in the country of his adoption. He has invited his half-brother to visit him in his far southern home, and the latter will accept the invitation. Aubin came to this city yesterday and deposited his money in the bank. He says he will continue to run his hotel as usual, despite the change in his fortune.

WATERLOGGED ON PACIFIC

Thrilling Experience of Ship's Crew and Passengers.

Astoria, Ore., Nov. 9. — The steamer Charles Nelson, which left Astoria Nov. 3, for San Francisco, became waterlogged off Heceta Head, and was abandoned by her passengers and crew. Shifting of her deck load in a terrific gale, carried away stanchions and opened seams in the deck. Heavy seas washed into the hold. After four hours of incessant labor the thirty-six persons on board, who had suffered intensely from a constant drenching, were taken safely aboard the T. Tania for San Francisco.

Pulls Patients' Teeth.

Kansas City, Nov. 9. — Cruelty to charity patients in Missouri state institutions was disclosed here today at the annual conference of the Missouri conference of charities and corrections by Professor C. A. Elwood, of Columbia, who has been investigating the almshouses of the state. He recited one instance of a woman patient in the insane ward of one of the almshouses who had often the superintendent one day while in a paroxysm. The superintendent, he said, had thereupon ordered all the woman's teeth extracted, and this was done. An investigation will probably result.

AUTO TOURIST'S UNIQUE ESCAPE

Dashed Over Precipice 300 Feet
Deep and Landed On Tree.

Paris, Nov. 9. — A remarkable adventure befell Mme. du Chatel and Dr. and Mme. Sachon, near Mande. While riding in their automobile at a high rate of speed on Pelouse hill at 9 o'clock in the evening their machine suddenly struck the parapet which crowns the 300-foot precipice. Before the automobile could clear the barrier and went sailing through space. Directly beneath was a powerful tree, whose branches not only broke the fall, but caught and held them. The automobile and all the safe and sound tourists descended to the ground without injury. At daybreak the machine was rescued. Marvellous to relate, it also escaped serious damage.

ROSEBERRY FACES HIS OWN WORDS

On Imperial Federation at Leicester Meeting.

COMMERCIAL REPOSE WANTED

Rather Than Fiscal Reform, He Declares—Says Canada Alone Has Made an Offer.

London, Nov. 8. — Lord Roseberry addressed 5,000 people at Leicester on Saturday. After comparing the evils of protection to the evils of the Arabian Nights, who, liberated from the bottle, swells to the size of the earth, the speaker said that Britain did not want fiscal reform, but commercial repose, to bind the wounds of the empire. Mr. Chamberlain had declared for agitating, then a general election, and then a disturbing commission of experts. While the Chamberlain system rested upon an offer by the colonies, the colonies had made no preferential offers. Canada had made an offer, but it was only in reference to commerce. Her offer was only to relieve Britain of the responsibility of making treaties on her behalf. The Toronto Globe, the ministerial organ, alone had treated the preference as a matter concerning the interests of Great Britain. Among the manufacturers, Mr. Ellis wanted the tariff against British raw materials, and Mr. Brock supported him, and wanted Canadian woollens protected against the ruthless competition of Britain. A two shillings duty on wheat, which would probably be exceeded, would not materially stimulate the production of wheat in Canada, and the enormous emigration of American farmers into Canada would hardly bind Canada more closely to Britain. It behooved the country to put a drag on and walk warily.

ATTACKED HER UNCLE WITH AN AXE; TERRIBLE DEED OF STRATHROY WOMAN

Fanny McGarvey Probably Fatally Injures Patrick Upton, an Adelaide Township Farmer, On Saturday Night.

STRUCK HIM THREE TIMES ON THE HEAD—DOCTORS SAY HE CANNOT LIVE

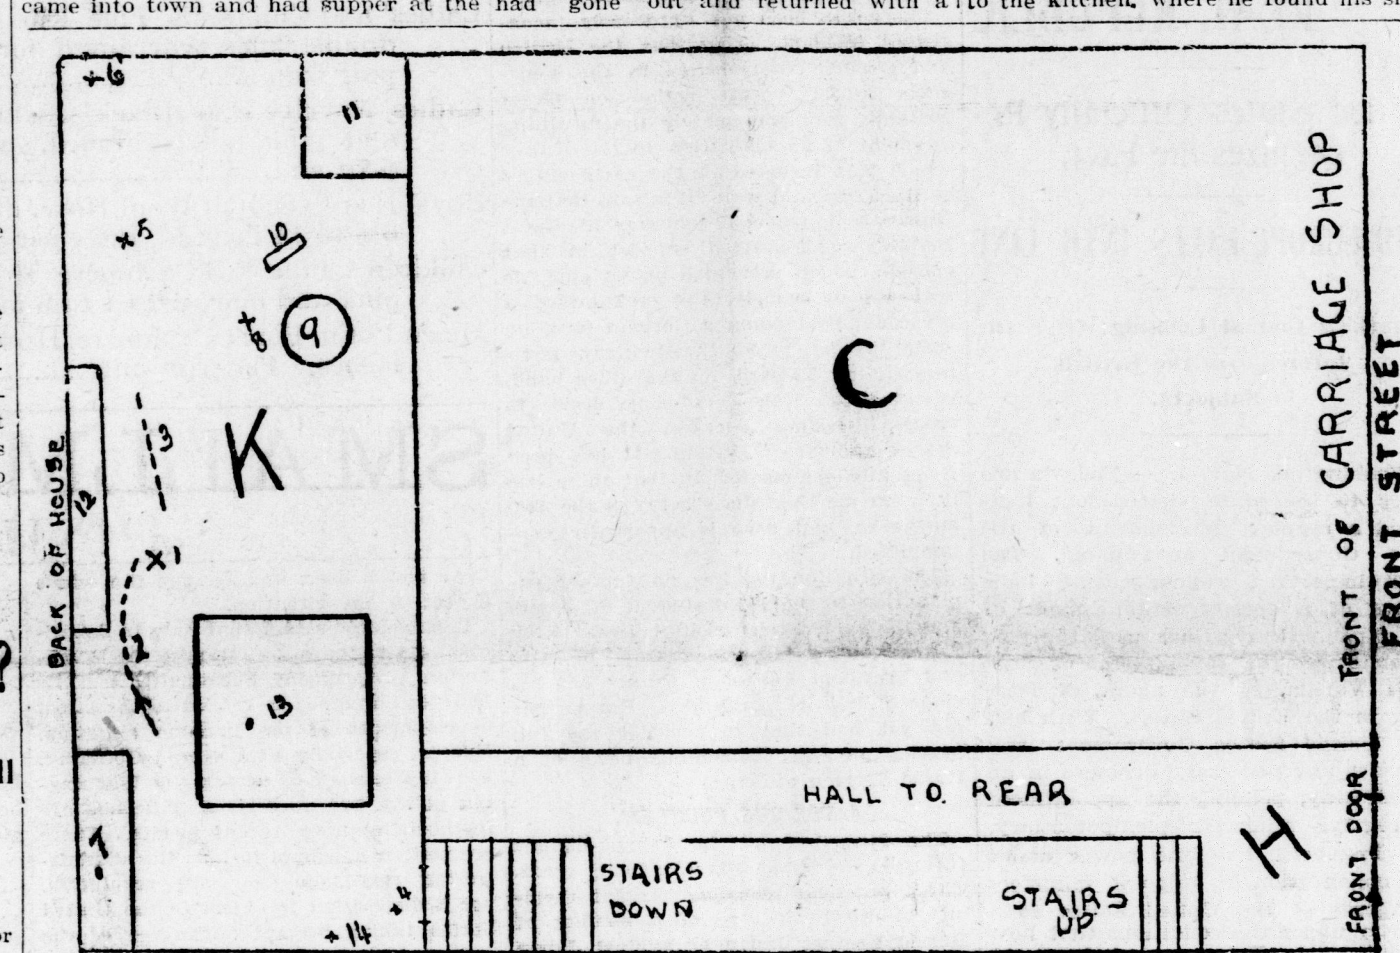

Skull Fractured—Woman Had Kept House for Upton for Twenty Years—Crime Was Committed at McGarvey's Home in Presence of Other Members of the Family—Woman, Who Is Now in Jail, Believed To Be Insane.

A terrible tragedy occurred at Strathroy Saturday night in which an Adelaide township farmer was murdered by his niece, who had been his companion for twenty years. Patrick Upton was the victim and Fanny McGarvey, his would-be slayer.

Miss McGarvey is 33 years of age, and Upton about 45 years old. The two have lived together for 19 years, the niece being her uncle's housekeeper. The woman, it is claimed, is insane though it is alleged by others that she had a motive in attempting to kill Upton.

Upton lived about seven miles from Strathroy and Saturday afternoon came into town and had supper at the and back of him and to his right lay Ed. McGarvey, brother of the accused, on a lounge. Miss McGarvey and Miss Fanny Appleton were also seated to the back of the victim and on the left. In the room also were Mrs. Ed. McGarvey and her children.

According to Miss Appleton's story, they were all engaged in ordinary conversation, when William McGarvey, another brother, came in and got a drink of water. She followed him into the hall and asked him if he were going to town and he replied no sooner said "yes" than they heard the screams. On returning to the kitchen they saw Upton fall to the floor and Miss McGarvey and her brother, Edward, struggling for the possession of the axe, which he finally secured. William told Miss Appleton to go for the police, which she did. That was all the mad woman—if she be mad—had gone out and returned with a with the axe over the prostrate form of her uncle, and saw her strike him again, so that the brains protruded, and blood was spattered in every direction. Edwinn, he says, had fainted, and he attempted to take the axe from his sister. While doing so, it is said, he called to his brother: "For God's sake come and help me or we

A FATAL FRENCH MOTOR CONTEST

Three Men Killed in Hill-Climbing Race Near Paris.

FLYING CARS COLLIDE IN FOG

P. Lambert's Machine Swerves From Course, Hits Tree and Instantly Kills Tree Owner.

Paris, Nov. 9. — The annual hill-climbing test for automobiles, which was held near Gallion, yesterday, had a fatal termination. Three men are dead, while several others were seriously injured.

The contest was hardly commenced, when a dense fog shrouded the course, making it almost impossible to see the length of the machine ahead. While running at full speed through the mist the cars of M. Danjon and M. Brazier came into collision. The impact was terrific, and both machines were reduced to a shapeless mass of twisted iron and splintered wood.

The unconscious forms of the occupants of the cars were carried from the wreckage to a nearby house, and medical aid summoned. M. Danjon and one of the mechanics were so badly injured that they died almost immediately, while two other mechanics and M. Brazier were seriously hurt.

A few minutes later the steering-gear of a machine in charge of M. Lambert got out of order, and before the chauffeur could shut off the power the automobile swerved, striking a tree at the side of the road with terrific force.

The automobile was a total wreck, and Lambert and his machinist were thrown nearly forty feet. When picked up the former was found to be dead and the latter seriously hurt.

Germany Has a Bad Scare Over Kaiser's Operation

A Topical Hit.

Paris, Nov. 9. — A new topical burlesque at the Moulin Rouge contains an amusing hit. An actor, representing M. Mollard, the chief of the protocol, announces that the king has just entered the house, and asks the conductor to play the national anthem.

The conductor asks: "Which one?"

The actor replies: "I forgot to inquire. Can't you play one adapted to all nations?"

The band then strikes up a hopeless melody of Russian, Italian, English and French national hymns.

M. Mollard cries: "That's dreadful. Stop! Play a tune suitable to the visit of any monarch to Paris."

Accordingly the band dashes bravely into the popular musical ditty, "Viens Pou Poule."

HEARD A CRY OF MURDER

following a blow. He ran to a corner, at first thinking that Patrick Upton was after him. A week before, it is said, McGarvey was threatened by Upton, for McGarvey had wanted to send Fanny to the asylum in London, as she was insane, he thought. Upton had said she should never go, and that he would shoot him, McGarvey claiming that Upton was found to have a revolver on him afterwards. However, no one attacked him, and McGarvey went back to the kitchen, where he found his sis-

CHILDREN LOST

IN MID-OCEAN

Mysterious Disappearance of Three Children From an Atlantic Liner.

New York, Nov. 9. — A dispatch to the Herald from Philadelphia says:

"Lost at sea is the only explanation of the disappearance in mid-ocean of three passengers on the Hamburg-American Line steamship Arcadia, which has arrived here. The missing persons are Anna From, Otto From and Josef Bona. The Arcadia left Hamburg with 45 steerage passengers, among them the From family, including the father, mother and five children, of whom Anna and Otto were the oldest. Anna and Otto From and young Bona were promoting the deck one morning, but when dinner was summoned, the three were not in their accustomed places. They were never seen again. That they had been carried overboard was the conclusion reached by the ship's officers, who are unable to explain why they made no outcry. If they had cried for help it is believed someone would have heard the
