HORSE SHOES.

Ledingham Brothers make an excellent display of horse shoes, from the foot wear of the fleet footed racer or trotter down to that of the ponderous dray horse, the nature of whose work necessitates the most substantial understandings. Most of these are the products of the factory, and have about them considerable style and finish, being drawn almost to a hair in their regularity, and polished like silver so as to show the texture of the metal of which they are made. The samples are, it is needless to say, very numerous, and, moreover, are graduated so as to regulate the pace of the animal and guard against over reaching, striking and some of the other vices occasionally incidental to action.

Next to this exhibit is a smaller one—that of R. O'Rourke—all composed of goods worked at the blacksmith's forge. Experts say that they are unexceptionable for their quality, and as such are sure to commend themselves.
