The following extract from the preface of a quaint old Almanack in the "Harleian Collection," answers so well, that the publisher gives it as an introduction to the Farmers Calendar:—"To all who buy Almanacks. Gentlemen; a good New Year to ye: and I believe you wish the like to us too, for that is but manners; but this is not all I have to say to ye. Do you think these sheets were printed for nothing? No: the book seller swears that if he thought you would not have bought um he would never have published um: and he swears further, the
