SLANG IN SHAKESPEARE

Good Many Inelegant Modern Term Used by the Master.

Leaving legitimate words, and turning to the children of the street and market-place, we find some curious examples, not only of American slang, but of slang which is regarded as extremely resh and modern. Mr. Brander Mat-thews, in his most interesting article on that subject, has already pointed out that a "geck of cards" is Shakespearean. In "Henry VI." (third part, act v., seene i.), Gloucester says:

But while he thought to steal the single ten, The king was slyly fingered from the

Mr. Matthews has also cited a still more rema. kable example of recent slang from the Sonnets, of all places in the world, where "fire out" is used in the exact colloquial sense of to-day. It occurs in the 144th Sonnet,

Yet this shall I ne'er know, but live in doubt Till my bad angel fire my good one

"Square," in the sense of fair or honest, and the verb "to be square," in the sense of to be fair or honest, are thought modern, and are now so conthought modern, and are now so constantly used that they have wellnigh passed beyond the boundaries of slaug. If they do so, it is but a return to their old place, for Shakespeare has this use of the word, and in serious passages. In "Timon of Athens" (act v., scene v.) the First Senator says:

"All have not offended;
For those that were, it is not square to se that are, revenges."

In "Antony and Cleopatra" (act ii., scene ii.), Mccaenas says, "She's a most triumphant lady, if report be square to her." In the soup," to express defeat and disaster, is apparently very recent, and yet it is singularly like the language of Pompey in "Measure for Measure" (Act iii., Scene ii.), when he says, "Troth, sir, she hath eaten up all her beef, and she is herself in the tub."

Even more recent than "in the soup" is the use of the word "stuffed," to denote contemptuously what may be most nearly dece. ibed as large and ineffective petentiou ness. But in "Much Ado' bout Nothing" (Act i., Scene i.), the mess nger says, "A lord to a lord, a man to a man; stuffed with all honorable virtues." To which Beatrice repies, "It is so, indeed; he is no less than a stuffed man; but for the stuffing.—Well, we are all mortal." Here Beatrice uses the phrase "stuffed man" in contempt, catching up the word of the messenger. "Flapjack," perhaps, is hardly to be called clang, but it is certainly an American phrase for a griddle-cake. We must have brought it with us, however, from Shakespeare's England, for there it is in "Pericles" (Act ii., Scene i.) where the Grecian-very Grecian—fin-riman says, "Come, thou shalt go home, and we'll have flesh for holidays, fish for The Ferriese (Act II., Seene I.) where the Grecian-very Grecian-li-herman says, "Come, thou shalt go home, and we'll have flesh for holidays, fish for fasting days, and moreo'er puddings and flapjack; and thou shalt be welcome."—From "Shake weare's Americanisms."— -From "Shake peare's Americanisms."-Harper's Magazine.

A GREEN GOODS SUCKER.

W. H. Orser, of Orillia, T-ken in by a Man Who " shoved the Queer."

W. H. Orser, a young farmer, who resides a few miles out of the town or Orillia, in Simcoe county, will have good reason to remember his visit to To Saturday last. If the story he told the police Saturday evening be true young Orser proved himself to be the most "gulltble" of men. He says he came here in company with Mr. Hugh Barry, a well-known horseman, and that the two put up at the Hulse House, on York street.

Orser's mission was to meet, so he Orser's mission was to meet, so he says, a green goods man, who was to give him $1,000 worth of the "queer" for $200 of money of the realm. In company with Mr. Barry, Orser says that shortly after his arrival he proceeded to a store on York street to meet the man with the "queer." Here the two were shown into a rear room and were shortly afterwards joined by a clean-shaven, bright looking young fellow, who professed to be the man who handled the bogus green backs. Mr. Orser examined closely what was alleged to be a fair sample of the "stuff," and he says it was "ajmost like the real thing." Impatient to get $1,000 of the same kind in his possession he closed thing." Impatient to get $1,000 of the same kind in his possession he closed the deal on the spot. In some inex-plicable way Mr. Orser's $200 had, dur-ing his briet visit to the city, dwin-dled down to $190. The balance, $10, however, was, he says, given him by Mr. Barry, and the whole wad went in the canacious may of the

Mr. Barry, and the whole wad went into the capacious maw of the bright young wan who had produced the alleged bogus bill.

"Wait just a second," said the latter, after getting his money, "while I get my handbag with the queer from my room." He disappeared, and apparently could not find his hand-bag, for he did not come back. The young farmer saited with his friend for a considerable time, and it then dawned upon him that he had been duped. He at once informed the policeman on the beat of the occurrence, and the latter in turn reported the matter at headquarters. The affair took place about 4 o'clock in the afternoon.

Although the matter was duly looked into by the police, no arrests weremade. Orser left Hulse's hotel about 8 o'clock last evening, and it is thought he has returned to his farm.

A PLUCKY WOMAN'S BATTLE

Desperate Struggle for Life With a Burglar.

The Midnight Visitor Grabs Her Throat and She Slashes His Hands With a Knife and Fically Stuns Him With a Blow From a Hatchet—The Woman's Night Robe Torn to Ribbons and Saturated With Her Assaliant's Blood.

A few days ago the Times published a lespatch from Stokes Bay, North Bruce, briefly describing an encounter which Mrs. Shute, wife of the postmaster, had had with a burglar, who entered the premises at midnight on the 18th, during the absence of the woman's husband. Owen Sound Sun gives the following additional particulars of the

It seems that on coming downstairs the plucky woman ordered the fellow out. Instead of going be picked up a stove-lid, and threw it either at her or the lamp was struck and the light put out, and the only look she had of the intruder was for the instant that intervened. Mrs. Shute describes him as a small man, with a very red face and small man, with a very red face and red mustache.

When the lamp was broken he rushed out and clinched, and threatened to murder her, and commenced kicking her, catching her by the throat. Then a desperate struggle ensued.

SLASHED HIM WITH A KNIFE.

SLASHED HIM WITH A KNIFE.

With a kuile she slashed the backs of the hands that grasped her throat. This infuriated the vidain, and he attempted to throw her to the floor, kicking her all the while.

Finally she was thrown against a pile of boxes, and, fortunately for her, her hand fell upon a hatchet. So tight was she in the embrace of her assailant that she was only abbe to hit feeble blows on the back of his neck.

The senife for life-for it came to be a life or death struggle-kept on, he trying to throw her down and at the same time avoid the blows of the hatchet and the knife in her hands.

A BLOW FROM THE HATCHET.

Finally, when thrown ag inst the counter, Mrs. Shute got her opportunity, and with one blow on the forehead the burglar dropped stunned at her feet.

Then she sprang out of the house and across the road to a boarding house and summoned help. The keeper came, but he was afraid to go in alone, and went to a hotel to secure further assistance. In the meantime the burglar straggered to his feet and made his way out through a back window and escaped. His constant demand in the struggle was for the money, and he was told to go to the till and get it. He had been through every corner of the store, post and telegraph office in the three hours he is suspected to have been there. Precautions had been taken and the money hid. A bundle of articles, including part of the telegraph instruments, was put up, but were found on the counter when the fellow left.

man answering to the description A man answering to the description Mrs. Shute gave was seen next day in an old lumber shanty, with his hands tied up, but the man who saw him did not know of the occurrence. Nothing further was heard from him, although three constables searched the whole country over until Saturday last, when it was reported that he was seen near Southampton.

Mr. William Stoddart, who came Jown from the peninsula on Saturday, was at Stokes' Bay on Friday and says the evidences of struggle leave no doubt as to ite desperateness, the floor being covered with blood. The nightrobe which Mrs. Shute wore was torn to ribbons and saturated with her assailant's blood.
