GOOD ADVICE

The merchant that would offer his customers imitations or substitutes for GENUINE BLUE TRADING STAMPS is liable to keep "imitation" goods.

Merchants desiring to give stamps to their customers should give stamps that are secured and protected by a reliable and responsible company. The merchant is morally responsible for every stamp he gives out, and the merchant who gives stamps that he knows are not good, or not likely to be properly redeemed, is doing a grave injustice to his customers and endangering his entire business.
