GUARDIAN OF THE TRADE FROM 'WAKERS' DISEASE

Entry of Cattle From New England States Forbidden— British Government Informed of Action— Empty Cars Must Be Disinfected

Ottawa, Nov. 30.—(Special.)—The Minister of Agriculture has taken prompt action to prevent Canada's cattle trade with Great Britain, a trade that amounts to about ten million dollars annually, being jeopardized by the outbreak of disease among the flocks and herds of the New England States. Hon. Mr. Fisher, when asked about the matter to-day, said that in the first place it was the World Saturday, that all cattle coming from New England ports shall be stopped and thoroughly disinfected before being allowed to cross into the Dominion.

"In the second place," continued Mr. Fisher, "we have forbidden absolutely any entry of cattle from the six infected New England States into this country. We have also communicated, thru the High Commissioner in London, with the Imperial authorities, informing them of what steps we are taking. We have further telegraphed to the Department of Agriculture at Washington, to ascertain what they are doing there to prevent spread of the trouble in the United States."

Hon. Mr. Fisher, was asked if, ordinarily, many cattle from the Eastern States came into Canada either for consumption or in transit. His reply was: "No, very few. But if exportation is forbidden by way of Port-au-Prince and Boston an attempt might be made to run cattle from the infected districts into St. John for shipment, so as to get to Canada or having ships sailing from Canadian ports infected with the disease, as this outbreak is ruining the cattle export trade from the New England States."

WANTS BOER GOLD BARS
DESTINED FOR DR. LEYDS

British Government Wires All German
Ports Making Inquiries Regarding $650,000.

Berlin, Nov. 30.—The British government is telegraphing to all German ports, making inquiries concerning a number of Boer gold bars worth $650,000, which it is supposed have been brought to this country from South Africa through the port of Port-au-Prince. The bars are destined for former President Kruger and Dr. Leyds, and it is presumed, had been concealed in the Northern Transvaal. Great Britain will endeavor to legally attach the gold if it can be located, on the ground that it is destined to the Boer people, but Dr. Leyds refused, averring that the money was to be used in upholding the Boer cause in the future. Gen. Botha has notified Dr. Leyds that unless the gold is given up legal proceedings will be brought against him.

Gratifying to Canadians.
Good Canadians will be gratified to know that the celebrated Canadian Mineral Water "Radnor" is growing steadily in popularity, both here and abroad. This result is entirely due to Radnor's undoubted excellence and the great care taken by the company in bottling the water in the most extensive and up-to-date manner, at the Radnor Spring in the Laurentians.

BREAKINGS AWAY.

The Globe is not the only paper that is having trouble these days. If half of the reports are true, another journal is about to pass into new hands, whose main effort will be to bury its past, perhaps change its name, repudiate its vacillating record. After many years of duplicity it is at last to confess itself found out.

The surprise that are coming to Canadians by the action of Hon. Mr. Tarte and Mr. J. S. Willison are but the prelude of still greater ones. A lot of things are breaking away, and, after long years of defiance of public opinion, individuals and newspapers are being found out.

Who the new purchasers are to be is only suspected as yet, but it is likely that some kind of a newspaper syndicate is being formed, ostensibly to buy the output of one big paper mill or own a paper mill themselves, but really to control four or more papers at different points. If this is so, the Willison-Plaville combination are not the likely purchasers. A few days will reveal the situation.

What is Coming
A gentleman who ought to know, says he has read most carefully Mr. Willison's statement.

"The significant sentence," said he, "is in his closing."

...and above all things not to employ the paper (The paper that Mr. Willison is about to start and the capital for which Mr. J. W. Flavelle will supply) for the promotion of the private or group of individuals.

"This," said the gentleman, "to my mind, means that Mr. Willison is either openly or in a glad-hand kind of way going to rip up the past record of his Globe, and the way in which it has been used to promote the private interests of individuals or group of individuals. He is in the position of Hamlet's father:

I could a tale unfold, whose lightest word would harrow up your soul; freeze your young blood; make your two eyes like stars, start from their sockets, thy knotted and combined locks to part, and each particular hair to stand on end, like quills upon the fretful porcupine.

Of course it means it. Mr. Willison's statement if it does not mean this, but where I meet a difficulty is that I cannot see what object Mr. Flavelle can have in this porting of Mr. Skelton's head. He fell out of the buggy, and Oliver jumped on top of him and in the scuffle lost his revolver. A man named Lockwood drove up in the darkness and Skelton got into his revolver fired, the bullet passing thru Skelton's head. Dropped Dead in a Church
Dr. MacCabe's Tragic End

Principal of Ottawa Normal School Passed Away While Attending High Mass in St. Patrick's Church, Ottawa—Had Been Married Only Two Weeks.

Ottawa, Nov. 30.—Ottawa was shocked to-day by the sudden death of Dr. J. A. MacCabe, principal of the Normal School, and one of the leading educationalists of the Dominion, who dropped dead in St. Patrick's Church during high mass. Dr. MacCabe was standing during a portion of the service requiring that attitude, and dropped to the floor. He was picked up by three or four men from adjacent pews and carried to the society, where medical attention, however, as death had come.

Dr. MacCabe was 70 years of age, and a particularly sad feature of it all was that he was but recently married. He was married to a popular young lady of the Capital, Miss Sims, but two days before his death. Dr. MacCabe was born in Ireland, and, like his father, was a teacher in the National School there.

Uxbridge, Nov. 30.—What came near being a serious accident occurred here Saturday afternoon about 5 o'clock. Miss Nellie McTear, daughter of the postmaster here, was returning from a visit to friends in Wywaite, when the horse she was driving suddenly bolted and ran hard for several miles along the icy road. It was stopped by coming in contact with a cow. The young lady was thrown out, but luckily grabbed the horse's bridle, and further damage was stopped. The horse had a bad cut in its neck, but the cow and Miss McTear escaped with nothing worse than a bad scare.

BURGHERS PROVED FALSE AND BRITAIN WAS SAVED

Dewet Writes His Book and Declares That His Immunity From Capture Was Due to the Inter- position of God.

London, Nov. 30.—"Had not so many of our burghers proved false to their own colors, England, as the great Bismarck foretold, would have found her grave in South Africa." That is the keynote of the Boer General Dewet's book entitled "Three Years' War," published in London and dedicated by the Boer general to "my fellow subjects of the British Empire."

It is perhaps the most remarkable book by the most remarkable leader that any recent war has produced. The concise, simply told tale of the extraordinary campaign is marked throughout with the stamp of truth. The baldness of the narrative only serves to bring into striking relief the fiery passages where a strong man in pathos and bitter denunciation, in thus taking the public into confidence, Dewet loses nothing of the glamor with which his exploits in the field surrounded him.

Spares None
In criticising his own side, Boer and Briton come equally under the lash. Dewet declares that whatever the English people may have to say in discredit of Gen. Buller, he had to operate against stronger positions than any other British general has ever had to operate against. He is not only to be praised for Lord Roberts and little more for Lord Kitchener. Gen. Knox is almost the only British general who seems to have struck Dewet as a commander with real military genius.

Says God Intervened.
Of "Tommy Atkins" he has many kindly words to say, and declares "the British never far from being bad shots." From the comparative immunity of the Boer forces he attributes to the interposition of God. "If any reader," he says, "wonders how I was kept out of the enemy's hands I can only answer, altho I may not be understood, that I believe in nothing else than that it was not God's will that I should fall into their hands. Let those who rejoice at my miraculous escapes give all the praise to God."

Nevertheless, the book teems with accounts of military and other strategies by which Dewet outwitted his pursuers. Frequently he recounts cases of desertion and panic among his own men when his entreaties and bluntness were all of no avail. Dewet pays tribute to Gen. Cronje for his bravery, but declares he lost at Paardeberg only on account of his fatal obstinacy in not leaving the laager as he was advised to do by Gen. Botha and by the writer himself.

What Might Have Been.
Regarding his own forces, Dewet writes: "It was far easier to fight against the great English army than against treachery among my own people, and after I was required to observe the rules of strategy had been observed in our efforts to break the English line of communication. Lord Roberts and his thousands of troops would have found themselves about up in Pretoria, where they would have perished of hunger. It was not the skill of their commander-in-chief that saved them. Of the block-houses, Dewet is frankly contemptuous. "The block-house policy," he says, "might equally well have been called the policy of the block-head."

Loyalty Pays Debt.
The writer emphatically defends the right to blow up railroad lines and trains as the usage of war, and he declares he never missed an opportunity to do so. The so-called war against women and the misuse of the white flag by the British is sternly denounced by the Boer general, who says: "That such direct and indirect murder should have been committed against defenceless women and children is a thing I should have staked my head could never have happened in a war waged by the civilized English nation, and yet it happened."

Montreal, Nov. 30.—"If anyone thinks we are not going to ask government assistance for our Pacific Railway project, the sooner his mind is disabused the better," was the emphatic statement made to The World to-day by Charles M. Hays, general manager of the Grand Trunk, who also expressed great satisfaction at the very favorable manner in which his own project, as outlined just a few days ago, had been received by the press and people of Canada.

It was observed to the general manager that public opinion was considerably exercised over the probable results of the new enterprise with the lations of the new enterprise with the Canadian Northern system. In reply, Canadian Northern system. In reply, he said that the business public of this kind, there were certain matters that could be worked out in a day, but the operations of a large cheque man at Guelph, Chatham, Peterboro, and other places, and the local detectives believe Carter is probably the much wanted person.
