WAR HAS MADE HUGE GAP IN THE RANKS OF LONDON'S SPORTSMEN

Wonderful Response Made to the Empire's Call by Local Athletes--Percentage of Sportsmen to Lay Down Lives Greater Than That of Any Other Element.

The response of London athletes to the call of the Empire will not be fully realized until after the war, but the fact remains that the conflict in Europe has created a gap in the ranks of local sportsmen that the city has great cause to be proud of.

If the battle of Waterloo was won on the playing fields of England, it can equally be said that the undying part played by Canada in Europe for the last four years was achieved primarily by the sportsmen of this country.

Whether their sporting spirit is responsible or not, a comparison of deaths on the field of action among those who participated in sports before the war and those who did not, would show that the sporting soldier element has been annihilated three or four times over to the latter's once.

The first prominent sportsman to represent London in France was Lieut.-Col. Campbell Becher and Woodman. The former, a young athlete, was one of the first to sacrifice his life, while the latter died during three years of war's discomforts.

and monopoly before he, too, was claimed. Lieut.-Col. Leonard was a follower of the hounds, of his horsemanship was recognized throughout the province. He was also interested in polo and practically every other pastime in the category of sports.

The Becherian stable's sportsmen who have died for their country is a long one. It consists of names of men such as Major Victor Kent, Major William Ashplant, Capt. Eddie McKay, Tucker Dunn, Allan Gages, Bart Cottam, K. S. Hill, Harris Mills and many more.

And there are several former London sportsmen who have laid down their lives. Clifton Carr, son of the former manager of the London Street Railway, died a prisoner in Germany. Harold Owen, son of Rev. Mr. Owen, formerly of the time is represented in France with the blood of their former London admirers.
