HISTORY OF TWO GREAT SILVER

GOW GANDA

"When the events of 1908 are lined up in the perspective of history, the discovery of the great silver deposits at Gow Ganda will take first place in the department of metallurgical enterprise."

The above paragraph raises the curtain on the interesting and fascinating story of this remarkable new camp, as told in the booklet of the Fairplay Mining Company, which will be sent on request, free

This tells the story of the camp, of its Indian traditions, its location, and of the discoveries, as of charge. written by one of the most competent writers in the Dominion of Canada, who was one of the first to see the camp, and who has personally inspected all the great discoveries which have made it famous. Lucidly and truthfully, the facts are presented, making a story that is probably not excelled in all that has been written of the silver camps of the north. The men who made the first discoveries, and the circumstances under which they found their way into the remote places of the north are well worth The story contains information that is invaluable to anyone who is interested in the silver fields.

JAMES TOWNS

The same booklet contains an historical and statistical story of James Township, commencing from the time, many years ago, when an Ojibway Indian found cobalt bloom at Silver Lake and at Boland Lake. By process of events, this led up to the movement up the Montreal River in 1907, and the discovery of the mines of James Township. The great rush into the country in the winter of 1908-9, which is still in progress, is told vividly and faithfully.

The Fairplay Mining Company will send this booklet, on application, FREE OF CHARGE. The Company's Prospectus will also be sent to anyone asking for it in person or by mail. This contains the official report of Allan Klingensmith of Elk City on the Company's mines in James and Gow Ganda, the gentlemen who are directing the enterprise, and tells of the thoughtful features of organization, which make this Company unique.

The Prospectus also contains splendid maps of Gow Ganda and James Township, locating all the principal properties.
