Southwest Toronto

Catholic Register: The peculiar or character of the contest which been closed in Southwest Toronto on Monday makes it a difficult matter to interpret the result. Of course there is no dearth of interpretations, as vari-ous and as unhesitating as the interests and schemes of those who put them forth; but the thoughtful, independent, unprejudiced observer finds portance that otherwise ests and schemes of those who put them forth; but the thoughtful, independent, unprejudiced observer finds many of them absurd and few indeed of them even reasonably plausible.

There was a general agreement from the outset that the constituency would be unfavorable to the government's recently adopted policy of prohibition of the liquor traffic during the war, with a submission to the people of the continuance of that policy after the py both political parties and adopted by the legislature at its last segion without a dissenting voice, might well, in view of these facts, of its character as a war measure, and of its inevitable in view of these facts, of its character as a war measure, and of its inevitable to endorse the candidature of anyone opposing it, it would almost inevitably have been kept out. It would surely kill their opponents with honest men thruout the entire proverince if they, having induced the government to adopt the policy, and having pledged it their loyal support, were to put up, in opposition to a straight supporter of the policy, a candidate who was not equally frank in his accuptance of it. Such a situation would have given the active support of every in the final stage the situation that has a been to name their candidate and make the fight of their candidate and make the fight of the passed.

If sir James Whitney had been in the premier's absence, his colleagues, in supporting this candidate, called for the rolling up of such the rolling up of such a large majority for him as might justify them in go-ing back upon that policy. Under these circumstances, for The Daily News to make frantic appeals to prohibitionists to come to the support of the government was as barefaced a policy in reference to the question. Of the two Liberal newspapers of the city, one openly repudiated him on this ground, and the other, while as-sisting him, declined to give his candidature full approval. But the antecedent action on the part of the government's approved candidate had put the government and its supporters beyond the possibility of being listened to in complaint by anyone but a dolt. A straight supporter of the govern-ment's policy might have gone down to defeat, but it would have been defeat with honor. And in estimating the probability of its occurrance, it can scarcely be doubted that the weakness displayed in relation to this policy was prejudicial to the general reputation of the government whole, the rather striking turn-over, in a hitherto overwhelmingly favorable constituency, cannot help being a blow to the government, in spite prohibition, despite the practical anni-hilation of the one minor candidate who came out in open and unqualified opposition to it, is far from pep-ular in Southwest Toronto. POLITICAL NOTES

No election held in Canada has ever got so much attention from the press as the one in Southwest Toronto. The daily mes are full of it. The comment is not varied as the number of commentators. There never was more independence of new, more disregard of party claims It may be that the great political awaking has begun. If so, good-by to the

And so there is!

The Toronto dictators of Liberalism, The Globe and Star, have received what was coming to them. Hartley Dewart was able to win without their support. In fact, it looks as if the absence of that support was a godsend. The Toronto World deserves a lot of credit for Dewart's election, and in passing it may be said that The World is neare presenting Liberal views than either of the papers mentioned. More than our Kincardine contempor
